SOFT LANDING ON TARGET

SURFACE SHOWN TO BE FIRM

Surveyor Relays Moon Pebble Films

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Surveyor I, defying longshot odds against a first-try success, televised striking photos of the lunar landscape today after a seemingly perfect landing on the moon.

The pictures indicated to scientific viewers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory that the Sea of Storms target area has a relatively smooth, hard surface apparently suitable as a possible descent point for future astronauts.

The successful gentle touchdown, executed precisely as scheduled, was viewed as a long stride forward for the United States' Apollo lunar exploration program. Surveyor's rocket braking system is similar to that on the craft astronauts will use for a landing later in the decade.

A picture series beginning at 2:44 a.m., PDT, using a different TV screen system than that of two earlier batches, showed a broad plain devoid of major features, peppered with either pebbles or pits caused by meteorites. There were several small prominences, and some gouging, as if the surface had been struck by objects from space at an angle.

The pictures showed no damage to the spidery, instrument-jammed craft, 10 feet high and 14 feet in diameter. And they showed its feet resting atop the crust—important evidence in view of opinions of some scientists that the surface might be deep dust or spongy lava that could swallow a landing vehicle.

LAUNCHED MONDAY

The 620-pound Surveyor planted its three legs firmly on the lunar crust at 11:17.37 p.m., PDT, 63 hours and 250,000 miles after its launch Monday from Cape Kennedy.

Its crucial terminal sequence—a cartwheel in space to point its feet moonward, then at 60 miles out a blast from its powerful retro-rocket engine to slow to landing speed of 8 mph—ended with all instruments apparently functioning.

Thirty-five minutes later, it began televising pictures sent throughout North America and overseas by three U.S. networks, employing the Early Bird satellite.

The first batch of three showed a leg and other portions, with the lunar surface in the background.

There was nothing to hint of danger to future manned landing craft.

A second batch of 10 showed more distant terrain—flat and featureless, except for a shadow, apparently that of the spacecraft, in the shape of a three, and what appeared to be a large rock.

EARLY SHOTS FUZZY

The first two series, televised with 200 scan lines compared to 525 for a home TV screen, were dim and fuzzy and difficult to interpret.

Later shots with 600 scan lines—Surveyor is expected to return hundreds before the chill of the lunar nights ends its life 12 days hence—were far clearer.

A laboratory spokesman said after viewing the first 144 pictures — received at the Goldstone tracking station on the desert to the east and relayed here—that the landing was firm enough to cause one foot to make a slight contact depression.

A shadow around the edge of one of the two feet within range of the camera indicated the depression was quite shallow—perhaps two inches, the spokesman said.

Dr. Leonard Jaffe, project scientist, said of the pictures:

"They show a surface generally level, as expected, with objects that appear to be rocks and boulders, or fragments, from close to the spacecraft for as far as the eye can see, apparently to the horizon.

"Some appear to be a foot across.

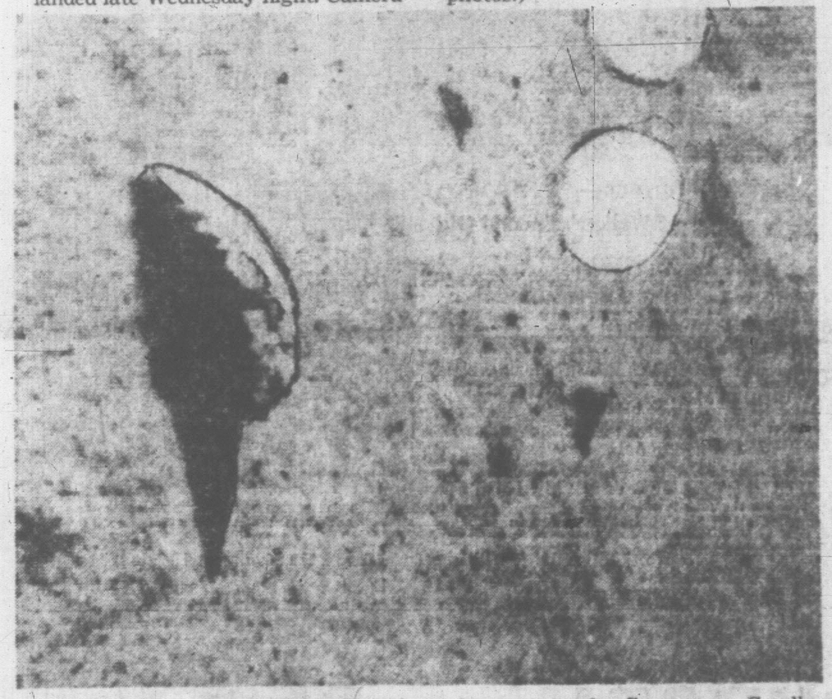
SURVEYOR'S "FOOT" causes a depression on the moon in this picture released today by Jet Propulsion Laboratory. The depression of the "foot" was made as the spacecraft landed late Wednesday night. Camera was six feet from the area photographed. Bright spots at left are sun reflections. Dark rings in lower right are reflections of TV tube as seen in the camera's mirror. (AP Wirephotos.)



MOON ROCK, six inches high and 12 inches long, is shown in this photograph transmitted from the moon by the spacecraft Surveyor. Smaller pebbles are several inches in diameter. Bright spots are reflections of sun.

Soviet Praise Tinged With Boast

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union praised the successful controlled landing of the U.S. Surveyor I on the moon today. In Britain, Prime Minister Harold Wilson sent congratulations to President Johnson "for this magnificent further achievement in the conquest of space."

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Soviet scientists think highly of the Surveyor feat calling it "an important part of the American moon program."

Tass pointed out, however, that the Soviet space ship Luna IX made the first soft landing on the moon Feb. 3 and asserted: "Foreign scientists admit that the flights of the Luna type helped the Americans overcome quickly the difficulties involved."

Tass said that with two soft landings having been accomplished, "traffic between the earth and the moon may be expected to become even livelier soon."

"This is natural, as manned flights to the moon will become possible only when the methods of soft landing in conditions where there is no atmosphere are mastered in full."

British television viewers saw a picture of the moon made by Surveyor that were flashed across the Atlantic by the Early Bird television satellite.

In Belgium, newspapers reported thousands were late for work because they stayed on to watch the moonshot pictures at home.

Japanese scientists hailed Surveyor's landing as "simply amazing" and "epoch-making."

Viet Nam Asks UN To Observe Vote

Security Council To Get Request

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—South Viet Nam today formally requested UN observers for its election of a constituent assembly in September.

The request was put verbally to Secretary General Thant by Ambassador Nguyen Duy Lien, South Vietnamese observer to the United Nations.

It was not immediately clear whether the Saigon government wanted the world organization merely to send observers or whether it envisaged a supervisory role for the UN in the elections.

OBSERVERS

A UN spokesman said Lien "informed the secretary general that the government of South Viet Nam intends to hold election for a constituent assembly in September and requested the United Nations to send observers."

He said South Viet Nam would make its request in writing later.

Only last weekend, before the request was made, Thant said in Windsor, Ont., he could not see the use of UN supervision of Vietnamese elections "at this time."

SOVIET OPPOSITION

On his return from Europe on May 5, Thant also said he saw no possibility of a UN supervisory role in Vietnamese elections because it would run into Soviet opposition in the Security Council.

Although the procedure to be followed was unclear, presumably South Viet Nam would be advised by UN officials to send its request — in clearer terms — to the 15-member council.

Some diplomats saw significance in the request in that it was the first time Vietnamese authorities had asked the United Nations to take any part in its troubled internal affairs.

Thant's reaction to the request was not reported.

Close Race In Irish Election

DUBLIN (UPI) — The Irish presidential election developed into a neck-and-neck struggle today as early returns showed a swing away from President Eamon de Valera's traditional strongholds.

Opposition candidate Tom O'Higgins was biting into De Valera's massive 1959 majority of 120,000 in the 38 constituencies and was reported well ahead in the capital.

At 9 a.m. PDT De Valera had 88,776 votes against O'Higgins' 69,269 on the basis of the first four areas to complete counts.

O'Higgins, 49, representing the Fine Gael Party, was polling heavily in the urban areas and had reduced De Valera's 1959 majority in the four rural areas reporting.

Observers believed O'Higgins needed to take substantial majorities in the cities to overcome the traditional strength of De Valera among the agricultural community.

Pact Ministers In Secret Talks

LONDON (AP)—Defence ministers of six nations of the Warsaw Pact are meeting secretly in Moscow to prepare for a reorganization of their alliance, qualified diplomats reported tonight.

Information from the Sovie capital indicated the ministers are laying the groundwork for a summit conference of leaders from the Soviet Union, Romania, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and East Germany.

RETIREMENT from public office was announced today by Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania. "I'm not going to run ever again for any public office under any circumstances," he said. Scranton, who lost the Republican presidential nomination to Barry Goldwater in 1964, completes his term as governor next year.

Balaguer Tops Vote In Dominican

SANTO DOMINGO (AP)—Conservative Joaquin Balaguer appeared today to have clinched a stunning victory over moderate leftist Juan Bosch in the Dominican Republic presidential elections.

With about half the vote counted, Balaguer, candidate of the Reformist Party, had 319,474 votes to 225,776 for Bosch, leader of the Dominican Revolutionary Party.

Balaguer and his supporters issued triumphant victory claims amid wild celebrations.

In the downtown sector, the heart of the constitutionalist district in the April, 1965, revolution, small knots of hostile looking young partisans of the Bosch party gathered at street corners. Police were patrolling the area.

A heavy vote piled up in the conservative-minded rural areas for Balaguer, who served as vice-president under dictator Rafael Leonidas Trujillo and as president after Trujillo's assassination.

Japan Firm to Develop Oil Holdings in Alberta

TOKYO (Reuters) — The Japan Petroleum Exploration Co. has reached an agreement to develop petroleum resouces in Alberta with local interests, a spokesman sad today.

The agreement, subject to approval by the Japanese government and the province of Alberta, will be initialled in Canada soon by Kiyoshi Yoshida, executive director of the Japanese firm, and representatives of a Canadian company, whose name could not be disclosed at this stage, the spokesman said.

Yoshida was scheduled to leave for Canada Friday.

The agreement concerns the acquisition of 50.1 per cent of the Canadian firm's stocks by the Japanese company and a joint project for the development of petroleum resources by the two organizations, the spokesman said.

Under the present plan, the Canadian firm, which already owns 617 square miles of mine lots in Alberta, would acquire another 308 square miles of mine lots in Alberta and two other western provinces, the spokesman said.

Oil fields would be developed at five sites in the 925 square miles of mine lots, to mine 2,859,700,000 gallons of oil at each site over a period of 20 years, he said.

The development project

Red's Luna X Loses Power

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Luna X unmanned spaceship, the moon's first man-made satellite, has run out of power and stopped sending information to earth, the news agency Tass reported today.

Luna X went into close orbit of the moon April 3, was in radio contact with Soviet stations until May 30 and made a total of 219 transmissions, the news agency added.

Tass also said that, as expected, the magnetic field around the moon is extremely weak. Micrometeorites are more numerous in space around the moon than in interplanetary space.

WIRE BRIEFS

Emergency Talks Out

OTTAWA (CP)—A Conservative bid for an emergency debate on Premier Lesage's use of RCMP files in the case of Arthur Vachon, president of the Quebec Provincial Police Association, was ruled out of order today by Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux. (See story page 19.)

Pickers Strike

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (UPI)—Striking Mexicans and Mexican-American melon pickers today extended picket lines to a fourth big farm and stationed pickets at bridges and a ferry crossing in an effort to make farmers raise the hourly wage to the national minimum of $1.25. The going wage for pickers is 50 cents an hour.

U.S. HOPES TO PROVE GEMINI 9 NOT JINXED

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—U.S. space officials, buoyed by the successful moon landing of Surveyor, said today that all signs are hopeful for a successful launch at 9:39 a.m. EDT Friday of the hard-luck Gemini 9 spacecraft.

Astronauts Tom Stafford and Eugene Cernan spent part of today at an old familiar pastime—practice.

Engineers were confident they have eliminated the computer system bug that balked Wednesday's Gemini 9 launch only one minute, 40 seconds before blastoff. They replaced two electronic parts, called logic modules, in the system that relays guidance commands from a ground computer to the spacecraft.

"Go" signals streamed in from around the world for the ambitious rendezvous and spacewalk flight.

EX-PRIME MINISTER FIRST ON GALLOWS

80,000 Silently Watch Hangings

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—More than 80,000 silent spectators watched as four former prominent cabinet ministers were hanged in one of Leopoldville's main squares today for plotting to overthrow the government.

Former prime minister Evariste Kimba, 40, was the first to go to the gallows. He held himself erect, with a black towel over his face and his hands tied behind his back.

The others — Alexandre Mahamba, 45, a former minister of lands; Senator Emmanuel Bamba, 46, a former finance minister; and Jerome Anany, a former defence minister—were executed at 20-minute intervals.

The four condemned men all walked serenely to their deaths, clad in identical blue shorts. They said nothing and were believed to be gagged under their black hoods.

There were two hangmen, clad in black robes over what appeared to be military uniforms. Four buglers faced each man and played the Last Post before the trap was opened.

The sombre crowd at the hangings contrasted sharply with the shouting, fighting gathering at the four men's hearing Tuesday, when any point the prisoners tried to make was hissed and booed.

The crowd included women and children, but many began leaving immediately after the first execution.

A number of high-ranking military officers, including Col. Pierre Ingila, chief justice at the tribunal which sentenced the men, were in attendance.

But three special chairs were vacant. They were understood to have been left for the three men the condemned politicians were accused of plotting to kill—President Joseph Mobutu, Prime Minister Leonard Mulama and the army chief of staff, Gen. Louis Bobozo.

Mobutu did not respond to last-minute appeals for clemency by religious and diplomatic leaders.

Most major Western embassies were closed and their staffs and nationals were instructed to stay indoors during the executions.

New Findings Open Door To Possible Cancer Cause

CHICAGO (AP) — Two new findings that open a new approach to the elusive goal of finding the cause of cancer and the means of preventing it were disclosed today by a medical research team from Columbia University.

The researchers presented the strongest tentative evidence yet that cancers may be started by viruses which then move on to repeat their destructive work in adjoining cells.

Dr. John K. Lattimer, chairman of the department of urology at Columbia University in New York, said virus-like particles have been found for the first time in healthy looking cells lying adjacent to cancer cells in prostate glands. They were not found in the cancer cells.

He said his researchers also discovered that these cells, which appeared normal under ordinary-light microscopes, were shown by electron microscopes to be actually growing at the "same tremendous rate" as cancer cells.

"The discovery of either condition was unusual, but when they appear in combination it becomes exciting," he said in an interview at the annual meeting of the American Urological Association.

Dr. Myron Tannenbaum, pathologist member of the research team, exhibited picture slides at the urologists' convention.

DEFINES NEXT STEP

Lattimer said the next step is to attempt to isolate the virus-like particles, grow them in a tissue culture and infect healthy tissue cultures with them.

If the virus proved to cause cancer, the final step would be an attempt to produce an anti-cancer vaccine, patterned after the polio vaccines and using dead or attenuated cancer viruses.

He said the work would require "six or seven years" before the final answer is found.

Lattimer said the virus theory does not conflict with current knowledge that cancers can be caused by chemical agents or other irritants. He said irritation or a change in hormone balance could alter a cell's resistance sufficiently to permit a virus to take over.

Other investigators have theorized that some cancers, including leukemia, are caused by viruses, but laboratory confirmation has been spotty. Lattimer suggested that may be because the studies centred on the actual cancer tumors rather than adjacent tissue.

First U.K. Gas Shortage Felt From Ship Strike

LONDON (CP)—A judicial inquiry into Britain's shipping strike opens formal hearings today, faced with the grim forecast that the best it can hope to do is get the country's trade back to normal in four week's time.

And for the first time, the striking National Union of Seamen has summoned the help of other unions and hit at the country's vital oil imports.

William Hogarth, general secretary of the 65,000 - member union, said Wednesday that even if the inquiry comes up with a basis for settlement, it will be four weeks before most ships can put to sea.

An interim report is not expected before the end of next week. Hogarth told a press conference that even if the report is satisfactory, it will take a week of hard bargaining to end the strike and another week to get crews, cargoes and passengers aboard the ships.

GAS RUNS SHORT

The first gasoline shortage caused by the strike hit thousands of motorists today in southern England.

Regent Petroleum, Britain's third-biggest oil company, said 80 of its filling stations in the Southampton area were running dry because British coastal tankers that normally supply the local storage depot are all strikebound.

The union also declared "black" two large tankers manned by foreign crews, which it said were being used for "flagrant strike-breaking." This meant the tankers, both under Panamanian registry, cannot be assisted by tugs.

Few oil tankers have been tied up by the strike. The union charged the oil companies with diverting British-manned tankers to other ports and bringing foreign ships to British ports.

As the strike entered its 18th day today, the point of congestion was drawing steadily nearer for major ports. Ford Geddes, chairman of the Shipping Federation, representing shipowners, has predicted it for next Tuesday at London and Liverpool.

The union said 689 ships were tied up and nearly 20,000 seamen on strike.

'Unnatural' Calm Settles Over Saigon

SAIGON (AP)—Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's South Vietnamese troops took over the Buddhist stronghold of Hue today without any resistance from Buddhist-led elements or anti-government troops that have held the northern city in open rebellion since mid-March.

The junta's forces seized Hue's radio station and other strongpoints in the city 400 miles northeast of Saigon a day after the ruling generals came to a political agreement with their Buddhist opponents in Saigon.

Hue was the last territorial strongpoint of the anti-government forces. Its recapture was a major victory for Ky, who has managed to stay in power with the support of his fellow generals and the United States despite the massive campaign mounted against him by the Buddhists.

After weeks of street disturbances by Buddhist youths, Saigon appeared unnaturally calm today. However, some Buddhist elements protested the Buddhist - government compromise agreement to add 10 civilians to the ruling directorate of 10 generals.

TAKEOVER BLOODLESS

Following up its seizure May 23 of Da Nang, the other Buddhist stronghold, the junta's troops swept into Hue without a shot after the departure of units of the dissident-riddled 1st Vietnamese Division.

Wednesday more than 1,000 students sacked and burned the U.S. consulate and an adjoining consulate residence in Hue.

A major factor in the government's reassertion of authority in Hue was a pledge of loyalty to the Saigon regime by Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, the rival to Ky whose ouster March 10 as commander of the northernmost 1st Corps gave the Buddhists an opportunity for their anti-government campaign.

Ky and Thi came to a truce last week at a surprise meeting arranged by the United States.

Buddhist crowds reacted angrily to the announcement of the compromise formula Wednesday. A mob of youths burned an effigy of President Johnson.

APPOINT CIVILIANS

The agreement came after two meetings of the ruling junta and representatives of the Buddhist Institute. The chief provision was that 10 civilians would be named by "mass organizations, religions and political parties" to the ruling directorate by Sunday.

It also called for election of a new junta chairman next Monday. The present chairman is Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, the Roman Catholic chief of state who with Ky has been a chief target of Buddhist protests.

The enlarged junta—or directorate—is also to name a "people's and armed forces council" before June 19 to help the present war cabinet until a civilian government takes over

The junta has pledged election of a constituent assembly Sept. 11 to draft a constitution and clear the way for a civilian regime.

Rhodesia Crisis Talks Resumed

SALISBURY (Reuters) — The second round of informal talks between British and Rhodesian officials was due to open today behind closed doors, as did initial discussions in London last month.

The two teams — seeking a basis for a negotiated settlement of the six-month Rhodesian independence crisis — were unchanged, except for the addition of an extra man on each side.

The teams had 10 days to think over the initial discussions and prepare for the current round.

Government officials here stressed that the secrecy the British government requested for the talks will be maintained.

Sir Cornelius Greenfield, chief economic adviser to Prime Minister Ian Smith, is head of the Rhodesian team. Duncan Watson, assistant undersecretary of state at the Commonwealth relations office, heads the British team.

'Marriage Breakdown Grounds for Divorce'

OTTAWA (CP)—A plea for divorce laws based on marriage breakdown rather than marital offences was made Wednesday by the Ottawa-Montreal conference of the United Church of Canada.

Proof of the breakdown would be three years of legal separation. Couples would be required to attend counselling sessions during this time.

The stipulations were contained in a resolution drafted by the church's board of evangelism and social service. It asked for a royal commission or parliamentary inquiry into Canadian divorce laws.

Rev. W. Charles Pelletier of Montreal told the conference it was "betraying Jesus Christ" by its stand. He had become "more and more concerned with the church's pronouncements on divorce and sex."

He said he refuses to perform marriages that would involve divorced persons.

The conference approved with little discussion a resolution asking for clarification of the Criminal Code as it applies to abortion to save life or health of the mother.

5 Language Schools Will Open This Fall

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has approved a 100-per-cent expansion of its two-year-old language training program to meet demands for bilingual civil servants.

Officials of the Civil Service Commission said Tuesday they will open five language schools in various bilingual cities next September. They will be located where the demand is found to be greatest in a survey to be taken in the next few weeks.

PROGRAM SUCCESSFUL

Civil Service Commissioner Sylvain Cloutier said in an interview the language program has been unexpectedly successful. It started in February, 1964, as an experiment involving 42 pupils and four teachers.

Today, about 1,980 English-speaking civil servants are completing intensive courses in French and 212 French-Canadians advanced courses in English diction and composition.

SCHOOLS PLANNED

Many civil servants in bilingual centres outside Ottawa have expressed interest in the courses and most of the five new schools are planned for them.

Another feature being introduced in September is a plan under which approved volunteers in smaller centres will take language courses in private institutions at government expense.

NORTH VAN TRUSTEES GET UNION OFFER

Schools May Be Open for Exams

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The striking North Vancouver local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CLC) offered Wednesday night to send 180 school board employees back to work to keep schools open for final examinations.

The union offer was the first breakthrough in a strike that started May 23 against the school board, North Vancouver city and district, and the North Shore Health Unit.

School board officials had expressed concern earlier this week that 18,000 students in the Vancouver suburb might not be able to write their June examinations if the strike against the school board continued

Municipal services — garbage collection, parks maintenance and sewer and road maintenance to name a few — have been tied up since the walkout started. Negotiations were to continue today.

The employees' offer asked for written guarantees from the school board that those who return to work will be given the same salary increase as municipal workers once the strike is settled.

Peter Powell, school board chairman, did not comment on the offer, but said a formal reply would be made to the union today.

OBSERVATORY CHANGES

Island Loses Top Scientists

The Dominion astrophysical observatory on Little Saanich Mountain here will lose its status as the headquarters of west coast astronomy within five years.

A new institute will be built on the University of B.C. campus to co-ordinate all western observatory programs, Dr. Graham J. Odgers, deputy-director here, said today in an interview.

It will mean the movement of about 10 top scientist-administrators from Little Saanich to the new institute including men like Dr. Odgers and Dr. Kenneth O. Wright, current director now visiting in Europe.

"But there's no need to be alarmed," said Dr. Odgers. "It will not mean anything detrimental to Victoria — abandonment or downgrading of the observatory here or anything like that.

INCREASE STAFF

"It will transform the character of the place but in fact the size of the staff will increase, because of the overall increase in staffs."

The staff increases will come as part of the intensification of astronomical study in this area resulting from recent completion of a major radio-telescope at Penticton and a 150-inch visual telescope that will be completed and installed in 1972 on Mount Kobau, near Osoyoos.

The expansion of activity was prompted by a breakthrough in the science of creating large mirrors a year ago.

Dr. Odgers said the world-famed 200-inch telescope at Palomar was made with a pyrex mirror "which is a very tricky thing and actually could be called a fluke. Nobody would try that again."

ARTIFICIAL QUARTZ

But Corning glassworks in New York has developed an artificial quartz which makes satisfactory lenses of that size "and we decided to take advantage of the opportunity so they began casting the 150-inch mirror five months ago."

The mirror "blank" will be ready by April when it will be shipped to UBC. By that time a $1 million optical shop will be built on the five-acre site proposed for the astronomical institute.

"It will be polished in the optical shop for four years and during that time the institute building itself will be planned and constructed," said Dr. Odgers.

The administrative here will be transferred to the institute when it is ready for operation a short time before the 150-inch telescope is completed in 1972.

Professors Launch Quarterly Magazine

Two University of Victoria professors are preparing the first issue of an international quarterly of life and letters.

The Malahat Review, as it will be called, is scheduled to come off the press for the first time by Jan. 1, 1967, to usher in the Centennial year.

Professor Robin Skelton, who is co-editor along with Professor John Peter, said the title of the new magazine "echoes the name of a mountain that is one of the dominant features of the Victoria landscape. It is rich in historical association, but free from the suggestion that the quarterly's contents will be limited in any particular way."

The editors have ranged widely, both geographically and in subject matter, for contributions. The rew quarterly has already accepted scholarly articles, fiction, drama, poetry, art criticism and memoirs.

The first three issues will contain material in translation from Mexico, Japan, India, Pakistan, Germany, Spain and the Philippines. Original works in English will come from New Zealand and Central Africa and there will also be a representation of Canadian, U.S. and British writers.

Professor Skelton will edit the quarterly in Victoria as well as continue with his lecturing and writing. He has published seven volumes of poetry, four works of criticism and several anthologies. He was recently elected a fellow of the Royal Society of Literature.

Professor Peter, who is one of five distinguished scholars appointed to be Commonwealth Visiting Professors at Oxford next year, will spend most of next year in research on his third novel. He will also establish contacts in the arts as editor-at-large of the Malahat.

BENNETT WITHOUT BRIEF SURPRISE OF CONFERENCE

The federal-provincial conference to be held here June 16-18 will be treated to a strange experience if Premier Bennett holds to his promise.

He told reporters Wednesday he will "listen" to the others and not present any formal brief.

"We are the hosts and this is good will," he explained. "They are here to help us with our centennial."

More often than not in the past, the B.C. government has put forward the most controversial brief at these meetings.

Last year word leaked out that Premier Bennett used the strongest language ever heard in recent times by such conferences when he lectured federal authorities on B.C. demands for more finances and constitutional power.

MAIN SUBJECT

The premier said although he will not make a written presentation, he will engage in discussion of the main subject of the coming meeting — financing higher education

Mr. Bennett added he was pleased the prime minister and other provincial premiers will come here because this will "bring it home to British Columbians that while everyone doesn't think the same in Canada . . . yet there is a bond on a broad basis."

He said it shows "co-operative federalism at its best" and special efforts will be made to enable Victorians to see the important visitors.

The official delegations will see Butchart Gardens during the morning of June 16 and that afternoon will drive in a cavalcade through Victoria to the Legislative Buildings.

PUBLIC SESSION

They will be greeted on the steps by Premier Bennett at 2:45 p.m. and assemble in the legislative chamber for the first plenary session — and the only public one — at 3 p.m.

Prime Minister Pearson and each of the visiting premiers will rise in turn — in the order their provinces joined Confederation — to make short opening addresses while spectators watch from the galleries.

These speeches will take the form mainly of tributes to the host province and the B.C. centenary.

Subsequent working sessions will be held in camera.

UNSETTLING EXPERIENCE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Retiring University of B.C. chancellor Mrs. Phyllis Ross said Wednesday the role of a university is to disturb and unsettle students, not to pamper them.

"I do not mean admission to a university should be a traumatic experience, but I do believe that creative and critical inquiry cannot go on in an institution that is placid, nor in a mind that is complacent," said Mrs. Ross.

She was addressing the first of three meetings of UBC's spring convocation.

A Matter of Motives

IN HIS COMMONS SPEECH criticizing the federal government for not settling the Quebec longshoremen's strike, now entering its fourth week, NDP leader T. C. Douglas no doubt had only one form of settlement in mind. That would be to force the shippers' compliance with all or most of the strikers' demands.

It was perhaps natural that both Liberals and Conservatives immediately counter-attacked Mr. Douglas with charges that he sought political gain through his parliamentary championship of the union men. It could be a difficult charge to refute, for while no one would question Mr. Douglas' sincerity in pressing for what he believes to be the correct solution for various national problems, he is much too astute and accomplished a politician not to realize the vote-getting value of his stand on the dockers' strike.

Mr. Douglas must also realize that machinery and regulations exist for the settlement of industrial disputes and that these processes are already being used under Judge Rene Lippe, the federal mediator. To intervene at this point, as Labor Minister Nicholson rightly pointed out, would not be the right procedure.

There is, of course, a point at which government intervention can be necessary, even imperative. When all efforts of the contending parties have failed, when the established methods of mediation or arbitration have been equally unsuccessful, then it would be the government's duty to step in with the full powers of a national administration and enforce as just a settlement as it could devise. This action would become even more urgent as the tie-up might infringe on the nation's security or viability.

Such a situation may now be approaching in Britain, where the flow of goods to and from the island has dwindled to a trickle as a result of the seamen's strike. Obviously, Prime Minister Wilson is loath to invoke government powers to re-open the ports, but equally obviously he could not shirk such a duty if the welfare of the country were imperilled.

The Quebec port situation has not reached this state, of course, although a continuation of the walk-out will result in irreparable loss to all concerned. The St. Lawrence shipping season is not so long that many summer weeks can be wasted.

Mr. Douglas' main concern seems to be that government spokesmen have not been active in the Commons, making statements which would provide pegs for NDP attacks. What Mr. Douglas does not stress is that the federal mediator is actively engaged in seeking a compromise solution to the dispute, that he is meeting with the opposing sides, and will now discuss with them a settlement formula based on collective bargaining procedures and suggested by the government.

The extent to which Mr. Douglas is aware of these developments—and as an opposition party leader he should be very much aware—is the measure of his intent to make political capital out of the situation rather than help create a quiet environment free of partisan excitement in which some progress may be made.

The Police and the Law

POLICE CHIEF JOHN GREGORY has repeated his protest that "the scales of justice are weighted too heavily in favor of the criminal" and has offered the unfortunate suggestion that "those who cry the loudest (against his argument) would bear a little scrutiny themselves."

Chief Gregory is voicing the familiar case of the policeman, the person entrusted with the enforcement of law. He is not quite correct in saying that crime is a paying proposition because the law makes conviction more difficult than it would be if some of the safeguards raised for an accused person were removed. Of course some guilty people go free under our system of law—a system which the Chief regards as horse-and-buggy in a jet age. But just as certainly, the rules against which he complains avoid injustice to the innocent.

If the Chief questions that argument, he might consider the challenge raised by Vancouver lawyer J. Raymond McLeod and supported by Mr. Alan B. Macfarlane on the issue of employing policemen as prosecutors. The members of the legal profession note how justice could suffer when the man who makes the arrest, or his colleague, presses the prosecution. It is the duty of the prosecution, the two lawyers point out, to place all the evidence before the court, not necessarily to place a man behind the bars.

Admittedly the elimination of some tried and proven legal practices could assist the police officer in his war on crime. So could larger police forces adequately trained. But if our system of justice is to preserve the respect it holds for law-abiding citizens, then the instruments of justice must equally be directed toward the protection of the individual's rights. Once these begin to erode, the results can be tragic.

Parity in What?

QUIETLY AT A MEETING IN Long Beach, California, the other day, the United Auto Workers of America took a decision which will have a profound effect on the Canadian economy.

The union meeting delegates decided that their top goal for bargaining next year would be parity in American and Canadian wages in the automobile and farm machinery manufacturing industry where the UAW holds jurisdiction. At the present time Canadian wages in the industry run about 40 cents an hour lower than American, and with the "rationalization" of manufacture brought about by the Canadian-American auto trade agreement, the union sees no reason for this state of affairs to continue.

The reason behind the UAW push for wage parity is not hard to find and it is not much related to brotherly concern for the plight of the underpaid Canadian worker. The fact is that the auto trade pact has, and will even more in the future, completely upset the balance of output in the industry. If wages are somewhat lower in Canada then the UAW can expect the manufacturers to concentrate as much of their work in this country as is feasible and ship the product into the United States. This would result in loss of job opportunities for American UAW workers.

If Canadians are doing the same kind of work as their counterparts across the border why should they not be paid the same amount? The flaw in this reasoning is that this is one industry only, and one in very special circumstances as a result of the duty-free agreement.

If wage parity is won, so far as Canadian auto workers are concerned, there is a real danger that while they would be earning more money on an hourly basis they would not be working as much or in such numbers. For one of the attractions for the auto companies to boost production facilities in Canada is that they can enjoy lower labor costs. At least one large firm, making agricultural implements, has announced that it is doubtful if it would continue manufacturing in this country for the American market if the advantage of the tariff agreement were wiped out by higher labor costs plus higher shipping costs.

One can understand the union, completely dominated by Americans, of course, using wage parity as a means of protecting jobs in the United States. But if the move succeeds it will mean a severe upset for the Canadian economy, not only in auto manufacturing but in every other industry dominated by American-owned companies.

A CANADIAN GIANT

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Crerar—A Monument to Faith in Man

Hutchison

IN almost half a century among politicians I have met many good and famous men but none I have admired so much, or known so well, as T. A. Crerar. Now that he has left Canada's public life, on which his honor is signed indelibly, the usual tributes are being paid to one of the few historical figures still among us. But for the most part they miss the point. The newspapers report, for example, that Senator John Connolly, leader of the Seanate and another great-hearted man, choked back his tears as he delivered a speech of farewell and then sat down and wept. Well he might, knowing that he would never look upon Mr. Crerar's like again. Yet the wages of public respect and private affection when the day's work ends, though honestly earned and doubtless welcome, are not enough. What Mr. Crerar's unique career deserves is understanding and it will not come in his time.

It is beginning to come nevertheless. By odd chance the newspapers reporting his last speech in the Senate at Ottawa also reported the proceedings of a different Senate at Washington. The two reports, standing together, suddenly illuminate both Mr. Crerar's mind and the real crisis of our age and nation. Probably this curious coincidence escaped him in the rush of departure but it explains everything.

In Ottawa Mr. Crerar tells the Senate that there are no finer people in the world than the people of Canada and "they deserve the best that our legislators can give them," something much better than they have been getting lately. This is no rhetorical flourish for the Hansard stenographers and the headlines. Countless times when no one else was listening, and in many secret political collisions which the historians may re-discover some day, I have heard Mr. Crerar's same testament of trust, not only in the Canadian people but in the human being everywhere.

His life, public and private, was built entirely on that trust. He believed in man as a rational creature, in democracy as the expression of this rationality, in freedom as man's natural state. Of all our statesmen he has been the most faithful democrat.

To be sure, his economic opinions are generally rejected in politics today as obsolete and mid-Victorian but it is too early for judgement on them. With all our shiny new tools of state management and foolproof progress we are not through our troubles yet by any means. Besides, these are questions of small account, a dispute of method only, beside the supreme question of man's ability, under any social system, to live as a man, not as a slave or a statistic.

Mr. Crerar has no doubt on that score but while he was speaking in Ottawa the opposite theory of man emerged in the United States Senate. The expert witness testifying there on the blunders of American foreign policy and the nuclear threat to mankind was another distinguished Canadian, Dr. Brock Chisholm, whom I know and deeply admire. This skilled psychiatrist bluntly informed a Senate committee that "humans rarely are rational." They have no guarantee that, like the ancient dinosaurs, they won't be destroyed by their own stupidity, their failure to adjust themselves to a changed environment.

Thus, from two eminent Canadian spokesmen, on the same day, you have antithetical views of the human situation and they are the only views that really matter. Every man who thinks at all must stand on one side of the argument or the other. There is no middle ground. The task of politics is to reconcile conflicting interests among men lest their quarrels extinguish them, but politics cannot reconcile the philosophical dispute which has been under way ever since men began to think.

In our present era, of course, Mr. Crerar belongs to a minority. The human species, in Canada and elsewhere, is not behaving as he had hoped, and of this behavior our chaotic politics are merely a superficial symptom. The future seems to lie with those who, like Dr. Chisholm, regard man as frequently irrational, dangerous and perhaps suicidal but just possibly curable, if they are given sufficient time.

Mr. Crerar is well aware that the social tide has been flowing against him, for he refused to fool himself, from the days of the Union government in 1917, onward. No contemporary Canadian has so varied an experience or so much reason for that cynicism and despair that are the trade mark of politicians, secreted behind their brave oratory.

Awaiting Tide Change

But without fooling himself, he has refused to change his mind and has waited for the tide to change. Though he cannot hope to see the change, he is persuaded that it will come at the appointed season. Whether he will be proved right or wrong later on is beside the point when one tries to reckon him as a citizen of Canada. The point is that he has stood immovable in the tide, and unafraid, keeping both his head and his integrity. That can be said of very few men.

After a friendship commencing forty years ago when I was a cub reporter and Mr. Crerar already a towering personage among the Bordens, Meighens and Kings, I could pay him my little tribute and reveal certain facts, as yet unpublished, that might help to measure his place in the Canadian scheme of things. But I shall leave the estimate to wiser men. History, in any case, must make its own measurement, true or false. For our generation two measurements, simpler and more reliable, will suffice.

All who have known this man, even his strongest political enemies, have respected him and most of them have loved him. In the sunset he is surrounded by troops of friends and the memories of other Canadian giants, now gone, himself not least but honored of them all.

Far more important, having drunk delight of battle with his peers and being part of all that he has met, the man has never surrendered his faith in his fellow men. It is an old-fashioned faith now-a-days, it is everywhere on the defensive and usually forgotten in the hurly-burly of politics, but without it what compass and what star have we left to steer by? So Mr. Crerar has navigated a long, eventful voyage to reach a sure harbor. For any man that is enough.

WASHINGTON REACTION

By WALTER LIPPMANN

A Change at the Top

Lippmann

THERE is reason to think that the recent disorders in South Viet Nam have had a significant effect not only in Congress and in the country at large but at the top of the administration. It is no secret that Secretary McNamara's Montreal speech, which broke so radically with the ideology of the administration, grew out of increasing skepticism and doubt about the soundness of the U.S. course in Asian affairs.

Mr. McNamara has special reasons for realizing that in spite of the continual escalation of American forces in Viet Nam, the forces against us are growing larger, and their fighting morale, despite deaths and defections, is unimpaired. Moreover, as the South Vietnamese army draws back from the fighting and increasingly disengages itself from the front, the military burdens upon the United States grow ever greater.

Against this loss of confidence there is at the moment little but the president's own faith that somehow and in some way, with enough men and enough guns and enough money, there will be a turn for the better by next year. It is this faith which postpones and indeed prevents the formation of a policy to bring the war to a negotiated conclusion.

Imprudent and Dangerous

There are impressive reasons why it is imprudent and dangerous not to take the initiative, why it is reckless to let the war drift and let events take their course. It is dangerous to do this because it is a near-certainty that no South Vietnamese government able and willing to play a substantial part in the war can be put together under General Ky and his junta. This being the reality of things, the United States will find itself increasingly alone. And this is the prelude to disaster. It is the prelude either to the disaster of a radical enlargement of the war all over Southeast Asia and into China, or it is the prelude to the disaster of a forced and humiliating withdrawal of our troops.

If the president fails to take the initiative, if he does not soon make the decisions to reduce our objectives and reduce our military commitments, he is taking a reckless gamble. Why does he take it? Is it because he really believes that when he has committed 400,000 troops and bombed closer to Hanoi and Haiphong, that this dismal and bloody stalemate will be transformed into a victory? I do not think that any of his military advisers are holding out that hope. Does he take the gamble because he believes that the Viet Cong and Hanoi will be moved to make peace with General Ky?

The actual block which prevents his taking a real initiative—not merely verbal appeals for a negotiation—is rather that the war is at a stalemate. We have not won a victory and no victory is in sight. As a result of the stalemate, a negotiated settlement of the conflict cannot and will not look like an American success, and Lyndon Johnson has a visceral aversion to unsuccess.

Whatever goes on in Viet Nam during the coming months, the critical question here at home is whether and how Lyndon Johnson can bring himself to accept anything less than success in an enterprise where he has staked so much of his personal reputation and so much of his country's prestige. In the perspective of history there is nothing unusual for the leader of a great power to settle for less than a victory, and to pull himself out of rather than to plunge more deeply into a quagmire. This is difficult for a proud man like Lyndon Johnson.

Perhaps the most critical question for the country is whether the president has the moral courage to master his pride so that he can pursue a policy that is prudent and wise.

"I'VE PUNCHED KIDS IN THE NOSE FOR LOOKIN' LIKE THAT."

Looking Back

From The Times of June 2, 1906:

OTTAWA—In the Senate on the bill incorporating the Pacific and Eastern Railroad, Mr. Ritchie, the solicitor, explained that the project was to begin at Victoria, extend to the northern end of Vancouver Island and then across to the mainland, first by ferry then afterwards by bridge. From there it was proposed to build through Yellowhead Pass to Edmonton and thence to Fort Churchill on Hudson Bay. It would be 1,800 miles in length and, connected with shipping, would be the shortest route to Liverpool.

Hide Truth If It Hurts

By RICHARD PURSER
from Washington

Purser

A NEWS photograph widely reprinted in the American press last week showed a South Vietnamese Buddhist rebel soldier in Da Nang, hands in the air, a prisoner of some of Premier Ky's loyalist troops. The caption explained that the prisoner, moments after the picture was taken, was shot dead by his captors. It was one of many hideous vignettes of the Vietnamese war — in this case, of the war within a war — which reporters and photographers on the spot have, as their duty demands, put before the public.

But it drew a rebuke from Mr. Robert Fleming, President Johnson's press secretary, who let it be known he did not think it was the kind of picture to publish just when the administration was trying to calm the U.S. public about the confused situation in Viet Nam.

Nothing has changed. If the truth hurts, suppress it, is still the White House motto. One of the fundamental truths is that war is hell. It is a commonplace truth, but most Americans have never been in hell. In this, the first television war, hell (especially the double hell of civilians innocently caught up in warfare) is brought home to the American people daily as jet planes relay TV film to the network hookup at Los Angeles.

The administration has never been pleased at the scenes relayed into the peaceful American home for the past year and a half. Mr. Fleming would hardly have been pleased had he seen the TV version of the incident that annoyed him last week; the complete film showed the victim being shot and submitting to the indignity of having his boots stolen by his executioners before he had even gasped his last.

Cambodia Report

In Washington later the same week, Maj.-Gen. Stanley Larsen, on home leave from his command of Field Force I in Viet Nam, told a press conference that about six North Vietnamese regiments were then based in neutral Cambodia, near the South Viet Nam border. There was enough evidence, based on interrogation of prisoners, reports of agents, and the observed retreat of enemy forces into Cambodia, to indicate up to 10,000 North Vietnamese regulars taking advantage of sanctuary in Cambodia.

The best word privately available in Washington is that Gen. Larsen spoke the truth. The inability of Cambodia (through no fault of its own) to seal its obscure, unmarked border is well known. Gen. Larsen was certainly not disputed by a Pentagon information office aide present at the press conference. But then politics reared its ugly head. The Pentagon five hours later put out a statement saying there was "no evidence strong enough . . . to validate the presence of any North Vietnamese regiment in Cambodia at this time."

Gen. Larsen had in fact said that he had no "direct proof." But direct proof is not always easy to get. The American military can't get this sort of proof without invading the Cambodian jungle. The evidence, however, points only one way. Sen Stuart Symington, a former secretary of the air force with intimate military contacts, was recently told the truth about the North Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

Qualification

But the Pentagon does not want the truth made official, because of the already strained relations between the U.S. and Cambodia. Gen. Larsen later had to return to the official line: "The defence department has a lot more information that I have. They look at it from a broader picture."

For "broader," read "political."

All of which explains why Sen. James Pearson (Republican — Kansas) up for re-election this year could rise in the Senate Friday to deliver yet another Webster's dictionary defines credibility as "the quality or state of being believed." But a government cannot assure its credibility by simply saying "believe us." It gains credibility from "a long series of matched words and actions," said Sen. Pearson.

The recent flurry over revelation by press and congressional investigating committees of materiel shortages in Viet Nam is a case in point. The administration did not reply by explaining the non-crucial nature of the shortages (if this was the case) or what was being done about them, but by denying categorically that any shortages whatever existed.

Sen. Pearson said the administration's posture of admitting to no mistakes, of trying to discredit those who report the facts, and of a generally "intolerant and bellicose" reaction serves only further to alienate critics and raise doubts among supporters.

Covering All Bets

When Sen. Robert Kennedy once suggested that the U.S. might consider negotiating with the Viet Cong, administration spokesmen got themselves variously quoted as agreeing, disagreeing, or being "very close" to Sen. Kennedy. Sen. Pearson described the administration as "frantically trying to cover all bets."

The senator, who supports the U.S. commitment to South Viet Nam, found the administration's main credibility weaknesses to be three: First, it is "unhealthily obsessed with a notion that it is always right and never wrong;" second, it has an overpowering urge to be "all things to all people at all times," and so worries more about nullifying criticism than about conducting policy; and it has an aversion to long-term planning, preferring to play things by ear.

Perhaps the last word for the moment might rest with Mr. Carl Rowan, lately resigned as head of the U.S. Information Agency: "I left the government five months ago thinking I knew what United States' policy in Viet Nam was. Today I haven't the remotest idea."

Ten Years Ago: The Great Pipeline Debate

Ten years ago the House of Commons was torn by a debate of such bitterness that the day on which it reached its peak, June 1, 1956, has been remembered as Black Friday. Disorder in the House reached a pitch of violence unknown in Canadian parliamentary history as the government forced through under strict rules of closure—cutting off debate by the opposition—of its bill to finance the Trans-Canada Pipeline.

Less than a year later, the Conservatives gained power in an election which ended 22 years of Liberal rule. Since then there have been five general elections, four of them resulting in minority governments, a fact which many political observers blame in part on the divisions caused by the pipeline debate.

The late C. D. Howe (left), minister of trade, was the central figure in the 1956 pipeline debate when he determined to invoke closure to pass this bill through the Commons. One of the tragedies of the affair was the ruin of the reputation of Rene Beaudoin, right, one of the great speakers of the House of Commons and an authority on parliamentary procedure.

The Bitterness Still Lingers On

By GRAHAM TROTTER

OTTAWA—"Time cannot heal these wounds." So wrote Eugene Forsey of Ottawa, a recognized constitutional authority, a year after the dust had settled from the most disorderly and rebellious debate in the history of Canada's Parliament.

Few will deny that the great pipeline debate of 1956 left its mark on Parliament and federal politics.

Stanley Knowles, New Democratic Party MP for Winnipeg North Centre who was one of the leading figures in the debate, says the Commons has been "a house of vengeance ever since" for the Liberal and Progressive Conservative parties.

Less than a year after the debate, the Conservatives gained power in an election which ended 22 years of Liberal rule. In the decade since 1956 there have been five general elections, all but one producing minority governments.

Backbiting

Sessions of Parliament have been fractious; snarling and backbiting have become commonplace; decorum and briskness have largely disappeared.

Many people trace these changes to the pipeline debate. It has been the standard against which contentious debates of subsequent years have been measured for excitement and bitterness — Coyne in 1961, nuclear in 1963, flag and Rivard 1964, Spencer and Munsinger 1966.

At issue in the acrimonious debate was the Northern Ontario Pipe Line Crown Corporation Bill to enable delivery of Alberta natural gas by a 2,200-mile, $375,000,000 pipeline to Montreal.

The government proposed to lend Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. up to $80,000,000 to cover 90 per cent of the cost of the cost of building the 575-mile Prairie leg to Winnipeg.

The bill also was to establish a federal-Ontario Crown corporation to build the 675-mile, $130,000,000 section through the rugged country between the Manitoba-Ontario border and Kapuskasing, Ont., and lease it to Trans-Canada.

Deadline

The government said the bill must become law by June 7 if the company was to be held to its commitment to complete the Prairie leg by the end of 1956.

The Conservatives, who wanted the project to be an all-Canadian venture, and the CCF, who wanted a publicly-owned pipeline, were opposed to lending public money to a company they said was 83-percent American-owned. They called it a sell-out to "Texas buccaneers."

Social Credit, based in market-hungry Alberta, supported the government. The Commons division was roughly 185 to 75 in the government's favor.

Debate started May 14 with introduction of a preliminary resolution by the bill's sponsor, Trade Minister C. D. Howe. Mr. Howe was the longtime strong man of the Liberals, a man of many portfolios and a get-it-done minister notably unenthusiastic about letting parliamentary niceties get interposed between himself and a desired objective. And at this time Trans-Canada was his special baby.

Mr. Howe exercised uncommon ministerial powers with zest and flair, but a year earlier his wings had been slightly trimmed by Parliament. All three opposition parties had united to thwart a government bid to extend indefinitely extraordinary powers of the defence production minister, who also happened to be Mr. Howe. After 10 days of debate and 106 speeches, the government had yielded and agreed to a three-year limit on these powers.

In 1956, with this example of a filibuster victory fresh in mind and convinced by several days of advance procedural skirmishing that the Opposition planned to use similar tactics against the pipeline bill, Mr. Howe reached immediately for the closure weapon.

On Time

It brought the pipeline bill home right on the government's self-proclaimed June 7 deadline. It also — besides changing the atmosphere of Parliament — wrecked the political career of Speaker Rene Beaudoin, regarded up to then as one of the greatest of Commons presiding officers, and served as the biggest single piece of ammunition in bringing down the Liberal administration the next year.

Mr. Howe himself, unbeatable at the polls since 1935, lost his Port Arthur seat in 1957 and never returned to politics. He died in 1960.

Up to the time he introduced closure with some special flourishes, this ancient device had been resorted to only seven times previously in Parliament's history. The Liberals did something that had never been done before, employing it at all four stages of the pipeline bill's passage.

Mr. Howe gave it a new twist of his own. In the past it had been used only to end protracted argument. At the end of his speech introducing the preliminary resolution, he said: "It is obvious that some members prefer to obstruct this motion rather than debate it." In the next breath he gave notice of closure before a single Opposition MP had spoken in the debate.

Under the closure rule, a cabinet minister gives notice of closure one day and moves the motion the next. When approved, it cuts speeches to 20 minutes and forces a vote by 1 a.m. of the following morning.

In the 16-day pipeline debate there were an amazing 70 votes, an unprecedented 24 of them on appeals against rulings by the chair — either Mr. Beaudoin or one of his deputies.

By contrast, there previously had been only two appeals since 1953 against rulings by Mr. Beaudoin, an urbane Montreal lawyer so steeped in parliamentary lore that he had just about completed rewriting the Commons' rules of order when the pipeline trouble fell upon him. And there was only one from 1957 to 1962 — a period that included some turmoil — when the Speaker's chair was occupied by Conservative Roland Michener. Such appeals have been abolished under current provisional rules.

18 Votes

Eighteen of the votes, including five Opposition appeals against rulings, were crammed into the sitting of June 1 — "Black Friday" — a day that saw a shouting and fist-shaking Opposition rebellion against the authority of the chair.

No Canadian Speaker ever faced so many challenges to his judgment, so many attacks on his conduct, so much clamorous disorder.

The Opposition, fighting the pipeline bill mainly on procedural grounds, challenged the legality under House rules of nearly every government move. This brought numerous clashes with the chair, which regularly upheld the government; and the Conservative-CCF combination contended Mr. Beaudoin and his deputies, pressured by the government, manipulated the rules to its advantage.

Chair Refused

They were particularly incensed over the chair's persistent overruling of their claims that they could talk on points of order and privilege. On some points the chair refused to hear any debate, although points of order and privilege usually take precedence over all other business.

Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent said no one was denied the opportunity to speak when he had the right to do so. The late Solon Low, Social Credit leader, accused the Conservatives of scraping the bottom of the barrel for an election issue.

There was irony in the 1956 position of the parties. The Conservatives were battling against a rule devised by their own party to end the bitter naval debate of 1913. The late Arthur Meighen was its author.

But in the 1956 debate the Conservatives didn't hesitate to taunt the government with the bitter words of a former Liberal prime minister who had described closure as "holding a terror over our heads."

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier was prime minister in 1911 and a government bill had been blocked for six months by a tenacious Conservative opposition, he preferred to call an election — which he lost — rather than impose closure.

This example from their past did not deter the Liberals in 1956.

Closure ended the resolution stage. After hurdling more procedural roadblocks, the government succeeded in introducing the bill itself in a sitting that ended at 4:41 a.m on May 16. Closure cut off debate on second reading (approval in principle) on May 23. Then the Liberals employed a form of closure within closure.

Its effect was to permit Opposition debate on only one of the bill's seven clauses while the legislation was before the committee of the whole House for detailed study.

In succession, Mr. Howe moved postponment of further consideration of the first three clauses. There was extended debate on clause 4. Then Prime Minister St. Laurent invoked closure, calling for immediate vote on all clauses.

Out of Order

The Opposition argue that the closure motion was out of order. They noted that the first three clauses had not been considered and that the last three had not even been called.

Deputy Speaker W. A. Robinson, who was in the chair, had quoted a British journal on parliamentary procedure as saying "the calling of a clause by the chairman brings it under the consideration of the committee."

It was at this juncture, on May 25, that Donald Fleming, Conservative MP for Toronto Eglinton, was expelled for the remainder of the day for defying Mr. Robinson's order to be seated.

As Mr. Fleming strode down the centre aisle to the standing applause of Conservative and CCF members, a colleague, Ellen Fairclough of Hamilton West, draped a big Red Ensign over his empty desk.

On June 1, the Commons day started at 11 a.m. and ended at 1:47 a.m. the following morning.

Earl Rowe, now Ontario's lieutenant-governor and then Conservative MP for Dufferin-Simcoe, wound up the debate for the Oppositon saying the day "will long be a black Friday in the history of parliamentary freedom in Canada."

It is still remembered as Black Friday.

Motion Received

The previous night, Speaker Beaudoin had received from Colin Cameron, CCF member f. Nanaimo, a motion declaring that statements in letters published in an Ottawa newspaper were derogatory to Parliament.

The censure motion, involving a matter of privilege, had the effect of preventing a vote on Prime Minister St. Laurent's closure motion and knocked one day off the government's schedule for the pipeline debate.

On Black Friday, the Speaker said he had made a mistake when he allowed the motion of censure to be introduced. He said he should have first asked for a vote on a ruling that the prime minister's closure motion was in order.

The Speaker asked the House to support him in his decision to reverse his previous ruling but the Conservatives and CCF took the unprecedented step of refusing to vote, maintaining there was no question properly before the House.

The Speaker's second-thought decision to rule Mr. Cameron's motion out of order was supported 142 to 0.

In the ensuing furore, Conservative leader George Drew gave notice of motion of censure against the Speaker, the first and only one in Canadian history.

Later, when Davie Fulton, Conservative MP for Kamloops, sought to gain the floor to move adjournment but was ingored by the Speaker, there was a wild scene.

Angered Conservative and CCF members, led by Mr. Drew and Mr. Coldwell, stormed into the centre aisle between the government and Opposition benches, shaking their fists at the Speaker and shouting such epithets as "Puppet" and "Dictator."

The committee stage ended — to shouts of "Heil Hitler" from the Opposition side and "Go home" from a spectator in the packed public galleries — with presentation of the third closure motion.

Boos, Cheers

As he left the Parliament Buildings after 2 a.m. June 2, Mr. Howe was greeted by some 100 booing and cheering spectators.

The bill was passed by a vote of 148 to 52 in the early-morning hours of Wednesday, June 6, after a fourth closure motion on third reading. But the trials of Speaker Beaudoin were not over.

Mr. Drew pressed on with his censure motion accusing Mr. Beaudoin of "subordinating the rights of the House to the will of the government."

The Speaker's position eventually became so intolerable that, after the censure motion was defeated, he submitted his resignation in a statement in which he denied his rulings had ever been motivated by party considerations.

Later he decided to stay on, at Mr. St. Laurent's urging, and his offer to resign never came before the House for disposition. But the pipeline uproar sawed off the trend of his career. He won re-election in 1957, but dropped out of politics before the 1958 election. His contemplated revision of the rules of procedure never was published.

Three and a half months after passage of the pipeline bill, Mr. Drew, in poor health, announced his retirement as Conservative leader, and little more than six months after the debate John Diefenbaker succeeded him.

Parting Shot

Mr. Drew fired a parting shot, crying "the fight for freedom of Parliament has just started." His successor made that a main theme of the campaign that brought the Conservatives to office less than a year later.

Mr. Diefenbaker promised to have the closure rule abolished, but there always seemed to be more pressing business. On March 26, 1962, the rule was saved, strangely enough, by the intervention of an MP who had fought its imposition in 1956.

Mr. Diefenbaker was moving that abolition of the rule be considered by a Commons committee when Liberal J. W. Pickersgill suggested there might be unanimous agreement to having his motion reworded to have the effect of wiping it out immediately.

But Erhart Regier, NDP member for Burnaby-Coquitlam, cautioned that misuse of closure in 1956 was no reason for destroying it. There the matter died. Closure has been used only once since. The Liberals brought it out on Dec. 15, 1964, to end the stretched-out debate on a new Canadian flag.

U.S. Policy Warped By Fear of Buddhists

By GAVIN YOUNG

SAIGON — By capturing Da Nang, using troops and teargas to control Buddhist demonstrators in Saigon, and arresting numerous political organizers in the capital and elsewhere, Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky's campaign to suppress the extreme nationalist Vietnamese Buddhists as an effective political force has achieved a tactical success. It is doubtful if victory is final.

The repression is the first real attempt of this erratic military man, whose standing in Viet Nam as a whole remains feeble, to turn himself into a new Vietnamese "strong man."

It also means that the elections Ky and the Americans now eagerly urge for September have little or no chance of being free or represenative, even if, as seems unlikely, Buddhists participate. Many of their organizers will probably be in jail.

Vote Sabotaged

In fact the elections yearned for by most politicians as a means to final "legality" in the government of South Viet Nam have apparently been tragically sabotaged by Ky's attack on Da Nang. Yet the support of the American Embassy officials for Ky's suppression of the Buddhist movement is clear.

Such support is in rigid conformity with the policy they committed themselves to probably—American observers here would say—before Ky's meeting with President Johnson at Honolulu in February.

It is a policy based on fear of an extreme nationalist Buddhist section of the political community, that is prepared to fight Communism but mistrusts American influence as well. This policy seems to favor any forceful government action designed to reduce the possibility of a strong "neutralist" political voice in an eventual national assembly.

Some senior embassy officials genuinely consider that when Buddhists express their anxiety—at a time when "the boys are dying in the paddy-fields"—that Americans are riding too cavalierly over Vietnamese sensibilities or that only a political solution can end the war, they are forfeiting the right to be regarded as "responsible" Vietnamese.

In other words, these Buddhists should be suppressed not accommodated.

Thus the American Embassy approved of the dismissal of General Thi, the Buddhists' favorite, from Ky's Directorate, although he was one of the most effective figures in it. They lent Ky aircraft when he threatened to "liberate" Da Nang soon after and were disappointed when he backed down.

Not all Americans here, it is interesting to note, agree with the embassy's assessment. General Walt, the American Marine commander, seems to have had reservations about the recent attack on Da Nang. Experienced American political advisers in Da Nang also did.

These advisers denied any Viet Cong penetration of the Da Nang Buddhist "struggle movement." They said that General Dinh (whom General Walt flew to refuge in Hue) and Da Nang's Mayor, Dr. Man (who was called a Communist by Ky and is now under arrest) were commendably restoring order in the area after the upheavals triggered by Thi's dismissal.

These cautious Americans, it is now disparagingly said in Saigon, "have been too close to the Vietnamese for too long."

Little Danger

One explanation for the Da Nang operation now given by Marshal Ky and American Embassy officials is that Buddhists were being infected with anti-Ky sentiments by Buddhist chaplains and that the area was outside Saigon's administrative control. Yet there seems insufficient danger in that to justify military repression—unless Buddhists and Viet Cong are thought to be one and the same.

It seems unpleasantly possible that further bitterness will be the price Vietnam must pay before Prime Minister Ky, an admittedly political novice, learns an age-old political lesson: that a popular, though minority movement—in this case led by shrewd and prestigious religious leaders and inspired by an extreme form of nationalism—cannot be snuffed out by force.

Three Cormorant Varieties But Pelagic Most Common

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

A reader asks: "What is the name of our common cormorant? How many different kinds are there?"

Three species of cormorant may be seen almost anywhere along the Vancouver Island waterfront. These are the double-crested, pelagic, Brandt's and the most common one will depend on the area under observation.

Dr. Carl

Around Victoria the pelagic cormorant is the most numerous by far. It is abundant around the islands off Oak Bay, where it nests each season, and also elsewhere along the adjacent waterfront. It is also the smallest of the three kinds likely to be seen but its relative size is hard to judge unless one of the other larger species is nearby for comparison.

During the breeding season there is no problem in identifying this bird because both sexes are marked with a conspicuous white patch on each flank. After nesting when the white patch disappears, the bird can be distinguished by the reddish-colored face and throat-patch. Otherwise it is an all-black bird with a longish neck and a slightly hooked beak.

When swimming, the cormorant sits low in the water with the neck held almost erect, not hunched up as in the loon. In flight they travel in lines or wedge formation much like geese but make no sound.

When viewed close up all cormorants are seen to be iridescent; in the pelagic cormorant the feather sheen is tinged with purple and green. The bare face and the throat is distinctly red.

In second place numerically but leading in size is the double-crested cormorant which is also common around the southern part of Vancouver Island. Its large size serves to distinguish this species when others are nearby for comparison; failing this, the yellow throat pouch is distinctive. Despite the common name for this bird, the double crest is rarely seen.

Although this bird is frequently seen around Victoria, the nearest nesting colony seems to be on Mandarte (Bare) Island, southeast of Sidney Island. Here about 150 pairs of birds nest each season along with pelagic cormorants, glaucuous-winged gulls, guillemots and other sea birds.

A smaller but more spectacular nesting colony of double-crested cormorants is on the Ballingall Islets in Trincomali Channel, a few miles north of Active Pass. Here many of the birds nest in twisted and gnarled juniper trees, presenting a rather unusual sight which attracts considerable attention on the part of passing boaters.

The third species in local waters is called Brandt's cormorant. It is about the same size as its double-crested cousin but has a dark throat patch, actually blue during the breeding season. A few of these birds may be seen around southern Vancouver Island anytime of the year and some regularly roost with other cormonats on Mandarte Island, but no nests have been found in this area.

A small nesting colony of Brandt's cormorants was finally discovered last year on a group of small rocky islets off Long Beach. So far this is the only known breeding population of this kind in British Columbia.

Cormorants feed primarily on fish which are captured by direct underwater pursuit. When submerged the birds use their legs for propulsion, though the wings may be called into play for braking and turning.

They are expert divers and may penetrate as deep as 180 feet. Diving to such depths forces the air from the numerous tiny spaces around each feather so to restore the insulating air cormorants often rest on a perch with their wings outspread.

While cormorants occasionally come under censure because of their fish-eating habits, they are such a characteristic part of the waterfront their depredations along this line should be overlooked.

VANCOUVER MOTORISTS GET TICKET HOLIDAY

There's No Loophole in City Parking Law

Owners of illegally parked cars in Vancouver are safe, temporarily at least, from prosecution.

But in Victoria they are still getting tickets.

The stop order to policemen regarding parking regulation went out Wednesday.

It followed discovery of an apparent loophole in the Motor Vehicle Act by Magistrate Les Bewley.

He said that a deletion was made in the act at the last session of the B.C. legislature. His interpretation of the deletion is that unless police catch the driver in an illegally parked car, no ticket can be issued.

This is because police cannot positively identify the driver. The car can be towed away, however, if it is an obstruction.

The deleted section of the act placed the onus on the car owner to prove he was not the driver when the car was parked. Since the deletion, the Crown must identify the driver to make the ticket stick, the magistrate believes.

In Victoria, however, city solicitor Terry O'Grady points out that Section 67 of the act is still in force.

It says that a car owner ". . . shall be held responsible for any violation . . . by any person entrusted by the owner with the possession of that motor vehicle."

"I can only suggest that prosecutors will rely upon Section 67 which makes the owner responsible for violations," said Mr. O'Grady.

Attorney-General Bonner said in Vancouver that he approved the action of Vancouver in taking the question to a higher court. He did not order a halt to issuance of parking tickets elsewhere in the province, however.

He pointed out that the suspension of tickets for parking in Vancouver was a decision taken at the local level.

The appeal is not expected to be heard until the end of June.

But Mr. Bonner said there would be some clarification "within several days."

Many drivers today in Vancouver were ignoring parking regulations secure in the belief they were free from the usual $3 fine. But they are finding out their cars are being towed away—at a cost to them of $5.

The stop-ticketing order is expected to cost the city about $5,000 a week and to lower revenues from parking meters, which normally yield $8,000 a week.

Cool Weather Boon To Sweet Pea Plants

By HILDA BEASTALL

Sweet peas are one of the annuals enjoying the coolish weather.

Supplied with a damp soil and a little shade over the root area, the vines are making strong growth, promising plenty of blooms by the middle of June.

Hilda

One of the English raisers of sweet pea seed, Charles Unwin, wrote in one of his books that the removal of vine tendrils leads to a decrease in quality of perfume in the blooms. This would explain in some measure why we think sweet peas in large shows are often lacking in this desirable gift, even though the size of bloom and clarity of color are superb.

Exhibitors may gain length of stem and flower size by removing tendrils as they appear but for garden decorations and fragrant bouquets in the home we may safely leave them alone.

For a couple of weeks as the vines are making their growth up to three or four feet, the first few flower stems can be nipped off as they appear.

It will be noticed that only two or three buds, sometimes even one, comes to a stem during this growing period so that little is lost and much will gained in increased vigor.

After two weeks the removal of buds is no longer an advantage and the viens will respond with many fine stems of blooms.

Another belief of Mr. Unwin, made from a lifetime of observation, is that the sweet pea flowers containing the basic blue or purple of the original highly fragrant peas from which today's were bred still contain the most fragrance.

We can all test this for ourselves this year, among the lavender, blue, purple and mauve colors we may grow. The white Gigantic is also conceded as being well perfumed.

Austria Lifts Bar On Former Archduke

VIENNA (AP) — Otto von Habsburg, son of the last Austrian emperor and former pretender to the throne, was issued a regular Austrian passport today allowing him to return to his native country for the first time since 1919.

Otto's Vienna lawyer, Dr. Ludwig Draxler, said the former archduke had "no plans for an immediate return" and would maintain his regular residence at Poecking, in the West German state of Bavaria.

The passport was issued by the ministry of interior following the decision of chancellor Josef Klaus' new Conservative government to settle the "Habsburg case."

The Socialist party, a member of all post-war governments until the present one, had blocked all previous moves to allow Otto to return.

Otto, now 53, had been barred from Austria since his father Emperor Karl I, was expelled after the 1918 collapse of the Austrian-Hungarian empire and the end of 640 years of Habsburg rule. Karl died in 1922 in exile on the Island of Madeira. Otto, a political scientist, historian and champion of European unity, renounced his claims to the throne and pleaded loyalty to the Austrian republic in 1961 in an effort to obtain government permission to live in Austria as do other members of the Habsburg family.

BARNEY OLSON
. . . varied career

HOTEL OWNER

Transportation, Arena Were His Major Projects

A man who came to Victoria in 1912 with $4 in his pocket and became a successful businessman died in St. Joseph's Hospital Wednesday.

Harold (Barney) Olson, aged 70, had a long career in transportation and was owner of the Strathcona Hotel. At various times he was interested in an airway, a miniature golf course, an ice arena and roller rink.

Born at Milltown, Wis., Mr. Olson was raised on a farm operated by his Danish father. He tackled every job on the farm and also ran a trapline.

Leaving school at 15, he drove teams of horses in lumber camps in winter and worked on the railway in summer. As a farm laborer, he put himself through an automobile training school at Minneapolis.

Later he came to B.C. to join his brother, Henry, and became chauffeur to the late Charles Spratt, owner of Victoria Machinery Depot.

He acquired his nickname from the racing driver Barney Oldfield.

In 1918, Mr. Olson bought an interest in a taxi and sightseeing company and a year later bought out his partners.

INTEREST IN AIRLINE

Then he began a career in transportation which took him to Seattle, Spokane and finally, in 1935, to Winnipeg. During this time he was part owner of Circle Tours, Inland Transportation Co., Seattle Grey Line, Greyhound Line and others. He was also interested in the former Alaska-Washington Airways.

Returning to Victoria in 1940, he became arena commissioner and acquired an interest in the Malaspina Hotel at Nanaimo. During the war years he operated an ice arena at the old Willows exhibition ground until it burned down.

Mr. Olson is survived by the widow, Mary, at their home at 1476 Beach Drive; two sons, Keith and John of Victoria; eight grandchildren; two brothers, R. S. (Speed) Olson of Victoria and C. H. Olson, Vancouver, Wash.

Rev. Robin Salter will conduct a funeral service in McCall's Chapel Saturday at 3 p.m.

Birth Control Propaganda To Be Allowed

ROME (AP)—The Italian cabinet was reported today to have prepared a law repealing the 35-year-old ban on birth control propaganda.

The change was said to be included in a wide-ranging reform of Italy's public security laws which the cabinet approved Wednesday. The reform plan must be approved by both houses of Parliament to be effective.

Newspaper reports said a section of the reform law would lift the ban on advertising and advocacy of birth control methods so long as they did not offend good taste or were not done solely for profit.

The present law, dating from the fascist era, does not prohibit the sale of contraceptives but bans public statements advocating them. Contraceptives can be advertised by brand name but not by function.

Russia Blasts 'Anti-Soviet Smear Campaign' in Canada

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia has protested to Canada against an alleged "anti - Soviet campaign" and claimed that it was being aggravated by the Ottawa government.

The protest was made in a statement handed Wednesday to H. F. Clark, counsellor of the Canadian embassy here, by a Soviet foreign minstry official.

It also accused unspecified Canadians of "provocative activities" against the Soviet embassy in Ottawa and called on the Canadian government to "put an end" to these activities.

Every time Soviet - Canadian relations showed signs of improvement, the statement said, "certain forces both inside and outside Canada . . . strive to harm these relations and darken the prospectives for their future development."

The statement alleged that the Canadian government not only did nothing to stop "periodic ant - Soviet campagns" but "helped to blow them up by false reports about so-called Soviet spying."

The statement linked the "anti-Soviet campaign" with investigations into the actvities of the late George Spencer, a Canadian post office employee alleged to have spied for the Russians.

"A particularly hostile campaign" had been whipped up around the Spencer case, it alleged.

Although a summary of the statemen[illegible]ublished in the Communist party newspaper Pravda did not mention the Gerda Munsirei case, other Soviet press comments recently have claimed that this is also part of a campaign to blacken the Soviet Unon.

Canadian sources today expressed their surprise and disappointment at the Soviet statement, which, they added, was only likely to add to suspicion inside Canada of Soviet activities.

Some observers here said the protest might put in doubt the scheduled vist to Canada of Dmitry Polyansky, first deputy prime mnister, who is due there at the head of a parlamentary delegation June 27.

CPR HOTEL PURCHASE ABANDONED

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Winnipeg real estate firm of Allan T. Bass Ltd. "did not complete" its planned purchase of Canadian Pacific's Royal Alexandra Hotel here, the CPR announced today.

A CPR statement gave no reason for the deal's abandonment. Mr. Bass said he would have no comment at this time.

Mortgage Group Adds Waterfront Area Holdings

Improvement of its investment security position by adding to waterfront property holdings is reported in the quarterly statement of Victoria Mortgage Corp. Ltd.

President Douglas Hawkes said more than 30 per cent of the firm's investment is secured by properties containing waterfront "an unsurpassable security".

The average investment against security, now 35.38 per cent, has been below 40 per cent for more than two years, Mr. Hawkes said.

Net company security amounts to $1,936,700, exclusive of bonds, of which there is $50,000 worth of B.C.-guaranteed PGE bonds.

Net mortgage investments up to May 24 totalled $685,218, the report said.

Extra preferred share dividend this quarter remains at the 3½ cent level started in December 1964, while the 1½ cent common share dividend is down a half cent from the February 1966 pay-out.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Mines Display Strength

The mining section showed strength in trading before noon on the Vancouver stock exchange.

However, volume was light with only 517,017 shares traded to 11 a.m.

Blue Star was the big trader, taking a three-cent climb to 35. Brenda was up 15 cents to $6.55 and Pyramid added 62 cents to $13.12.

Among other gainers were Adera, up seven cents to 43, Cowichan, up four to 84, Hogan, up five to 95, and Kamloops, up three to 35.

In the senior mines, Pine Point added $1.75 to $63.50.

Futurity continued to trade heavily in the oils, adding a cent to 91. Peace River and Share took slight losses.

B.C. Tel in the industrials dropped 87 cents to $61.62, and Scott was off 25 to $18.75.

* * *

Prices were mixed at both Toronto and New York in dull trading.

AT TORONTO in the main list, Great Lakes Power and B-A Oil gained ½ each to 27½ and 33, and Alcan Aluminium ¼ to 40¼. Bank of Montreal was down ⅞ to 59¾ and Massey-Ferguson ¼ to 35½.

Base metals showed good strength with Pine Point up 1⅞ to 64⅞, Cominco ⅜ to 40⅞ and Denison ⅜ to 48¾.

Banff advanced ⅜ to 15½ in western oils and Canadian Industrial Gas and Oil ¼ to 13¾. Union and Canadian Superior lost ¼ each to 28⅝. Union and Canadian Superior lost ¼ each to 28⅝ and 18⅝.

Anglo American Molybdenite climbed 12 to 72 cents in speculative mines.

AT NEW YORK the list was a hodge-podge of gains and losses as traders seized the occasion of the early rally to sell and take profits on short-term gains.

The early rise was featured by aerospace, airlines, electronics and other high flyers. Gains of one or two points in some instances were shaved to fractions, in others they were erased entirely and losses took their place.

IBM took a loss of five points.

Fractional gains were held by Pan-American, American and United Airlines, while Eastern slumped about 2½.

AT MONTREAL utilities and banks were off, but most other sections moved fractionally higher in heavy trading.

Papers were higher, with Consolidated climbing ¼ 38½ and Abitibi ⅛ to 11⅛.

AT LONDON the market declined further today. Selling was not large but enough to show losses of up to one shilling in many industrials.

Gilts fell away by ¼ or 5/16. Dollar stocks were inclined easier. Most Canadians were dull but Hollinger and Trans-Canada Pipe hardened a shade.

Toronto was firmer but other Canadian banks eased a little. Home banks were little changed but insurance saw some sharp falls.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP)—Most prices showed underlying firmness in dull trade on the Winnipeg grain exchange today.

There were no reports of export disposable as strikes continued to plague St. Lawrence River and British ports.

Flax disclosed light hedges in routine buying. Higher linseed oil prices on the continent were also a factor.

Rapeseed recorded modest advances in giving notice of an upward swing in Chicago soybean prices.

Oats and barley trade was on a domestic basis.

Big Portage Dam At 250-Ft. Level

VANCOUVER (CP) — A labor force of more than 3,500 men and millions of dollars worth of machines have already raised the Portage Mountain dam more than 250 feet, with more than 27,000,000 cubic yards of fill, B.C. Hydro and Power Authority said today.

By the end of the 1967 construction season the big dam near Hudson Hope on the Peace River will have reached its ultimate height of 600 feet and extend 6,700 feet across the Peace River valley.

The men and machines are working on a round-the-clock basis, seven days a week. Hydro said that on May 27 they achieved what is believed a world record for fill placement — 150,000 cubic yards in a 24-hour period or 130 tons a minute throughout the day and night.

Hydro's goal is for production of the first power from the giant dam by October, 1968, with ultimate devlopment of 2,300,000 kilowatts for power-hungry B.C. in the 1970's. Hydro is constructing a 575-mile-long 500,000-volt transmission line from the dam down through the centre of the province to carry the power to the populous lower mainland area.

Extend Deadline On Unlisted Board

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver Stock Exchange has decided to permit the unlisted stock board to operate on its floor after June 6.

The action was taken by governors. In a brief release after a meeting, the governors said: "Action regarding trading in unlisted securities has been deferred pending further notice."

Early in March, the exchange gave 90 days notice that the board would be removed and members would not be allowed to trade unlisted securities on the floor. The deadline would have been June 6.

Industrial Production Shows Gain

LONDON (UPI) — Rapid growth of industrial production in North America and a sharp upturn in Japan increased world industrial output in the first quarter of 1966 although growth was slower in Europe than the rate achieved in the latter half of 1965.

Excessive wage rises and price increases in many countries were causing "widespread concern."

The independent National Institute of Economic and Social Research said this in its quarterly review and forecast another increase in world output this year.

It said that the difference between recent developments in North America and Europe primarily reflected differences in the behavior of private investment. Such investment was booming in the U.S. and in Canada while in Britain and Western Germany it was slowing down. In France and Italy it was hesitant.

The institute noted that "the usual measures" had been taken to restrain climbing wages and prices like credit curbs, price controls, tax increases and official guidelines.

In Europe, these measures have been more effective in checking the rise in prices than that of wages with unfortunate results. The squeeze on profits was discouraging investment.

In North America price increases were still "relatively moderate" but had accelerated recently but profits as well as investment were still booming.

Car Output Second High

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. auto output last month was the second highest in history for May, despite a variety of handicaps, including production cutbacks, supplier shortages and labor disputes.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors listed May's car production at a total of 794,524 units in preliminary reports Wednesday. This was well below the record of 837,166 set in May, 1965.

PERFECT FIR POLE is destined for conspicuous role at Expo '67 in Montreal. Cut on Vancouver Island at Northwest Bay logging division of MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd., it will become the flagpole in front of the Canadian government pavilion at the world exhibition site. The original tree was more than 100 feet in height, and its present flagpole length is 94 feet. It is shown being loaded aboard a railway car normally used for carrying autos for trip east. Length of flagpole necessitated use of special railway carrier. The tree began life as a seedling in 1657 and at the time of confederation was already a mature Douglas fir.

BETTER BUSINESS BUREAUS

Big Expansion Predicted

More branches of the Better Business Bureau in Canada will parallel the expansion of national economy, executive officers meeting here predicted Tuesday.

There are 10 BBB offices across the country now, two of them in B.C.

International vice-president Willard M. Zurflieh, New York, who assists local areas establish Better Business Bureaux, commented:

"There is a great future for the BBB in Canada as the economy expands."

He said business itself must support a local office; bylaws of the organization forbid taking grants from the national organization or from government.

The organization was established originally to protect business, Mr. Zurflieh said. Consumer protection results as a byproduct.

But business has been shortsighted in failing to explain its position, he said.

"We have a generation growing up today feeling that business is unethical, that enormous profits are being made," he said.

It is up to business to show just how small the profit margin really is, the visitor said.

Besides its North American offices, BBB operates in Puerto Rico, Venezuela, Mexico and Israel, and is about to expand into England and Japan.

Mr. Zurflieh said he was "happy to see more local money from other than U.S. sources in the development of Canadian business," mindful that a great dependency on U.S. capital has been traditional in Canada.

Later, Attorney-General Robert Bonner told a windup dinner it is little realized that 75-80 per cent of invested money last year was Canadian in origin, presenting a new profile in the country's economic history.

"For the first time," Mr. Bonner said, "the Canadian people earned and saved enough to do something effective with it."

$1 MILLION CAR PLANT SET ON HALIFAX SITE

HALIFAX (UPI)—Volvo, Canada, Ltd., has announced plans for the construction of a $1 million automobile assembly plant here, to replace the Swedish firm's present factory at Dartmouth.

The announcement was made by Karl Kohler, president of Volvo, Canada. The move to Halifax is scheduled for early 1967.

The move from the Dartmouth site was forced by termination of a lease the company had held since it set up the plant here in 1963.

TOP-LEVEL MISSION

Bid for Closer Ties With France

OTTAWA (CP) — A high-powered trade and finance mission representing government and industry leaves Canada Friday for a 10-day visit to France, hoping to encourage closer and more profitable ties between the two countries.

The mission, headed by Industry Minister Drury, follows visits to France earlier in the year by Trade Minister Winters and External Affairs Minister Martin, both of whom said Franco-Canadian cultural links as well as commercial ties need to be knotted more tightly.

The mission, organized by the federal trade department, will spend most of its time in Paris.

AIDE TO GO —

Mr. Drury will be accompanied by his parliamentary secretary, Jean-Charles Cantin, Liberal MP for Quebec South.

Among the key personnel from Canadian financial and business circles attending are Marcel Faribault, president of General Trust; Neil J. McKinnon, chairman of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Canada; W. B. Boggs, president of de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd.; John R. Bradfield, chairman of the board of Noranda Mines Ltd., and R. H. Keefler, president of Northern Electric Co. Ltd.

Others include:

Max Bell, chairman, FP Publications Ltd., Calgary; Francois E. Cleyn, president, Cleyn and Tinker Ltd., Huntingdon, Que.; R. M. Collins, senior vice-president, Domtar Ltd., Montreal; Charles W. Gibbings, president, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, Regina, and James Sinclair, chairman, LaFarge Cement of North America Ltd., Vancouver.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL CLAIM SENATORS

Auto Pact Runs Into Snag

OTTAWA (CP) — The auto free trade agreement with the United States ran into stiff opposition in the Senate Wednesday, with Conservative senators terming it unconstitutional and harmful to Canadian parts industries.

Sen. Harry Willis (PC — Ontario) said the agreement is unconstitutional because the Canadian cabinet implemented it in January, 1965, without consulting Parliament.

Sen. David Walker (PC — Ontario) said it is an exercise in futility for Parliament to debate the agreement now that it has been in force for 16 months. He accused the Pearson government of again flouting the supremacy of Parliament.

The Conservatives adjourned the debate on a resolution ratifying the agreement and said they will press the government to refer the pact to a Senate committee for public hearings. The Commons approved the agreement last May 6.

Sen. John Aird (L — Ontario) defended the pact, saying it contributed to a 27-per cent jump in Canadian car production in 1965 to 855,000 units.

In other business, the Senate gave second reading to a supply bill authorizing the government to spend $450,944,478 in June. The measure was expected to be passed today.

Sen. F. W. Gershaw (L — Alberta) spoke on the need for federal action to conserve water resources and combat polution.

If any decision was made to divert Canadian water to the U.S., full compensation should be demanded.

'We Can Afford to Give Much to Hungry Nations'

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Less than the price of a postage stamp can mean hope and survival for one human being.

In the world today a child dies of hunger every three seconds.

In India, half the children die before they are 12.

These are three of the rockets fired in Victoria today by Mrs. Mary H. Poaps, associate director of Oxfam of Canada.

It's almost startling to get these brutal facts from a woman of such cheerful demeanor as Mrs. Poaps — a native of Edmonton who spent 25 years in Vancouver before moving to Toronto in 1961.

But Mrs. Poaps is too vigorous and cheerful to fall into a state of melancholy over what seems a hopeless battle against over-population and under-nourishment.

She is too busy doing something about it.

Her job is to help establish Oxfam groups across Canada to raise funds and undertake projects.

NOT DISCOURAGED

"I'm not discouraged," she says, "but we have to face facts. The world population is rising at the rate of more than three Canadas each year.

"Some 60,000,000 additional mouths have to be fed annually and, in under-developed countries food production is not keeping pace.

"We will find no true peace until the problem of feeding, clothing and housing all human beings is solved."

Mrs. Poaps believes that Canadians mush shoulder their full share of aid in bringing hope to starving countries.

Of Oxfam (the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief) she says:

"It's not just another charity. It is a world-wide charity bank giving grants on a need priority basis for emergency feeding, education, medical aid and self-help.

IN 89 COUNTRIES

"We have established agencies, working on the spot, in 89 countries of the world. Wherever there is a natural disaster, we send funds as quickly as possible to provide emergency shelter, food and medicine."

Oxfam of Canada is an offshoot of the Oxfam group which was formed in England in 1942 by a group of businessmen and church leaders to help starving children in Greece.

But Oxfam of Canada functions independently.

"It is better that way," Mrs. Poaps said. "This is a wealthy country and it can afford to give much to hungry nations. We should take a national pride in doing so."

On a tour of Canada, Mrs. Poaps addressed a meeting of Victoria's Oxfam group in the Friends' Meeting House, Fern Street, Wednesday night.

CHARITY BANK

"We are an international charity bank," she said.

Robin Skelton, chairman of Oxfam Victoria, was in the chair and with him was Norman Stephens, honorary secretary.

Mrs. Poaps listed some of the ways in which money donated to Oxfam can be spent:

- One dollar buys 800 cups of milk for a school feeding program.
- Ten dollars maintains a student in a technical college in Hong Kong for more than a week.
- Twenty-five dollars buys quality hybrid vegetable seeds for a whole village.
- Six hundred dollars provides a community well for irrigation and a fresh water supply.
- Three dollars will buy sufficient fertilizer to produce enough food to feed a family of six for six months.

SOCREDS PLAN VICTORY FETE IN KELOWNA

The B.C. Social Credit League will celebrate the 14th anniversary of its assumption of power in Premier Bennett's hometown of Kelowna Aug. 1.

The premier Wednesday told reporters he appreciated the gesture "very much" but revealed no details of the form the celebrations will take — other than that he will not be shooting any flaming arrows again as he did several years ago at a bond-burning ceremony in Kelowna.

Youth Found Guilty Possessing Pigeons

Rodney Kercher, 18, was warned in court Wednesday to stay away from pigeons.

Found guilty of being in possession of six racing pigeons valued by their owner at $50 apiece, Kercher, of 2526 Scott, was told that pigeons, especially those at the top of the pecking order, are better left alone.

"This may seem an exaggerated flutter in a dovecote," said Magistrate William Ostler giving his verdict.

"But there is a close bond between pigeon fanciers and their birds."

Pointing out that Kercher had helped remove the pigeons' bands, the magistrate said he must have known the pigeons were private property.

He said the birds, registered racing pigeons, were in a sense "deflowered" when their bands were removed.

Pigeons are banded at five months of age and cannot be banded again, court was told at an earlier hearing.

Kercher's defence counsel, Jack Gatehouse, submitted his client didn't know the pigeons were stolen. He claimed banding procedures weren't common knowledge.

"I didn't know the significance of bands on a pigeon until I was told last week," he said.

Two juveniles earlier testified they had stolen the birds from their owner's loft and put them in an enclosure kept by Kercher.

Evidence revealed the three youths sold pigeons for approximately $2 each in the Chinese community where they are considered a delicacy.

The six stolen pigeons, shown in court at an earlier hearing, have been returned to their home loft.

Kercher was remanded to June 11 for sentence.

TRUSTEES PASS RESOLUTION

Car Park Sharing Asked

Vancouver Island school trustees will be asked to support a move by Greater Victoria school board to have the provincial government pay part of the cost of providing parking space for students with cars.

The school board Wednesday night passed a resolution asking the government to split cost evenly for student parking lots. Under present regulations the government will not pay any of the cost for parking lots.

As a result, school boards don't provide them. Recently Saanich objected that failure to provide off-street parking at the new Reynolds Road school would cause traffic congestion and result in inconvenience to residents of the area.

At the time, Trustee Peter Bunn suggested that the municipality should lobby the government to share the cost of such facilities. He made the motion Wednesday night at the school board meeting and it was passed unanimously.

It will go before Vancouver Island trustees at a meeting in Victoria June 11 and will be presented next year to the B.C. School Trustees Association.

Totem Incorporates Run Away From It

A copper shield purchased by an Indian tribe hundreds of years ago on the lay-away plan is commemorated in a new Saanich totem pole.

The pole will be unveiled Saturday at Bute Street and Trans-Canada Highway by Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis.

The shield, or Ha-yetz in the tongue of the Tsimpshians of the northern coast, was purchased from a tribe at Sitka, Alaska.

It was ordered by the Tsimpshians to do honor to their chief, who was a wise woman called Maltsk. When she died the shield would be a mark of her prestige.

An agreement was made that for four consecutive years the Tsimpshians would send to the Sitka copper workers, 10 slaves, 10 war canoes, 10 moosehides and 10 kegs of grease. When payment was complete the shield was delivered.

It was called Na-ha-hood, which means Run Away From It.

The shield has been passed down from chief to chief since that early day. Now it is held by Chief We Shakes Charles H. Dudoward of Port Simpson. It is valued at $10,000.

When Chief We Shakes undertook to carve a totem pole for the B.C. Centennial Committee's Totem Route (20 poles being erected at coastal points to welcome B.C. visitors), the chief worked the Na-ha-hood into his design.

The Git-na-geak band of the Gis-ba-wat-wada clan of the Tsimpshians use as crests the killer whale, the grizzly and the Thunderbird (with wings folded). And these figures also appear in the pole.

Chief We Shakes and Chief John Hunt of Kelsey Bay will attend the unveiling ceremony. So will dancers of the Kwakiutls of Victoria area.

Hospital Group Registered

The former Victoria and District Hospital Planning Council this week became registered as a board under terms of the Societies Act of B.C.

The move drops the word "council" in the old title.

Its objects remain the same as a board, which is to assist in economic development of hospital facilities in the Greater Victoria area.

Directors named are J. W. Casey, retired; George Masters, Royal Jubilee Hospital administrator; Dr. J. L. M. Anderson, Jubilee medical administrator; Pat Blewett, St. Joseph's Hospital assistant administrator, and W. E. Morrison, administrator of Gorge Road Rehabilitation Centre.

COST OF NEW SCHOOL DOUBLES IN 2 YEARS

Greater Victoria School Board Wednesday night approved a $620,423 tender for construction of a new school at Richmond and Newton.

The tender from C. J. Oliver Ltd. of Vancouver compared with a bid of $659,649 from G. H. Wheaton of Victoria.

When the board two years ago thought of building the school it estimated the cost at $341,900. The proposed 16-room school is intended to serve an area when student population has grown rapidly as a result of recent garden apartment development.

LOOKS AT SPORTS

In terms of length the annual inter-high school's BVD ballet ran as long as Gone With the Wind. It started Tuesday at 5 p.m. under sun-kissed skies and ended at 9:30 under goose-pimples. Oak Bay won the points championship but the school boasting the most pupils with advanced influenza won't be known until they check the hospitals.

Holding the meet in the evening was an experiment decided upon by the Greater Victoria Inter-High School Sports Council Executive. If they thaw out before winter they may realize that a May evening is not ideal for cavorting in your underwear.

You can run a track and field show in mukluks but you can't run a hasty 440 in them. Some competitors ran not so much for the glory of East Ithaca Tech but to keep their blood from turning into Vaseline.

Another bit of brilliant meditation by the beloved teachers was to conduct track and field events simultaneously. To take in the two-mile run, boys' broad jump, girls' high jump, boys' pole vault and girls' discus requires a neck with ball-bearings and five pairs of eyes.

It's hard on the coaches, too. It's all very well for a coach to holler "Sic 'em Jeremiah" to one competitor but how long can his larynx last if he's forced to scream "Sic 'em, Jenniffer, Cloudsley, Finkelmire, Konopsky and Petts—Garrett—I mean, Parrett-Getts?"

With Close Out, It Wasn't Close

Oak Bay won the first race and the last and enough in between to dominate the meet, but they never had it wired. In the jocular jargon of Mr. William Garner, in charge of sweat pants for Victora High, "wired" means sewn up, stitched, pre-ordained, in the can.

Coming down to the final relays, the fat points events, Victoria High, in the words of Mr. Garner, had the boys' sprint and quarter relays wired. "With Close, it won't be close," was his motto.

But David Close, their excellent sprinter-anchor man pulled a leg muscle ("it's like a dish of jelly" said Garner) after winning the 100 and 440 and had to cancel out. Garner was forced to shuffle his cards—"you ask a 100-yard man to run 440 and he says, 'Uh? Me? Gee, coach, I'll try' "—and hope for the best.

The way Oak Bay and Claremont were wiping up the relays the best for Victoria High was second place.

In the loud lungs and rah-rah department the undisputed leader was Claremont. By tradition and population, Oak Bay and Victoria High have a lock on this affair.

Claremont with 520 pupils (against Oak Bay's 1,010 and Victoria's 1,380) and proportionately less qualifiers, amazingly accounted for nine victories. But their spirits were always higher than some allegedly dispensed by Lloyd Percival. They clung in groups around the scoreboard, neat in their blue haberdashery with "CLAREMONT" in scarlet on the back, clapping up a storm.

Who's More Fatigued—Pop or Jr.?

In sheer percentages, the track team of Steven Hume was distinctly noticeable. B student Hume ("I may only get a C in French") carried Mount Douglas colors and in truth the school.

Mount Douglas sheered off three first places and Hume accounted for two. He is a well-muscled 160-pounder who takes off his black-rimmed specs to run. His eyesight may be weak but his legs are not.

Hume is not exactly flowing grace in motion. "Floppy" would best describe his style. But he is powerful and he grinds away.

His 880 time of 1:59.9 easily surpassed the record set six years ago by John Valiant of Victoria. Valiant, now at Washington State, was THE definitive prep track star of his era.

Hume brought along his own cheering section, four brothers and his mother and father. To look at the father, flapping wildly about in the stands and ending up like a soggy rag, you woud have thought HE had been doing the work.

Scholarship applications are in for Hume at Washington State and Oregon. Western Washington College has wooed him. But he realizes the competition runs deep down there and may yet enrol at Sleepy Hollow in Gordon Head.

A Mile With 19 Like a Gang War

Between the 880 and the mile (which he also won) Hume also cantered forth in the 440. Cantered is the word. Asked why, he explained: "I didn't really have a chance and with the mile still to come I didn't want to burn myself out. But by finishing sixth I still could pick up 4½ points for my school."

Hume's biggest problem in the mile was at the starting line. In virtually every event, qualifiers raced in either A or B divisions, based on times.

But in the mile they tossed A's and B's together like salad. They lined up in four rows, 19 of them. You would have thought first prize was the cheerleaders.

A small Esquimalt runner, Ian Phillips went on the Bill Daley and let the others come and get him. Hume likes to lay about fifth and make a bold charge. But in this one he stayed closer, second and third.

Phillips hummed nicely for three quarters with everybody waiting for him to keel over. Few realized he hadn't run in earlier races and had lots of pepperoni.

Chris Garrett-Petts (from Oak Bay, where else?) came up to Hume's shoulder on the final backstretch then faded. No disgrace; he had run and won the two-miler earlier. At the turn Phillips didn't look as if he might get his clock cleaned. But Hume who seems to operate with a sprinter's shoulder thrust when he kicks, kicked the traces over and sailed home. He was hardly breathing but you couldn't same the same for his pater.

You Must Put It ALL Together . . .

The meet offered it's female heroines . . . Colleen Davies of Oak Bay, facilely taking the 440. The 440? Yes, Miranda, they have a girls' 440 in Victoria. They also have people who want cops to wear booby helmets and councils that build stadiums without lights.

Esquimalt displayed Carol Kitchen. When Carol runs, things heat up. Like clocks. She took the 60 and the 100 but in the 220 she never had the lead and folded. Since she had proclaimed the 220 as "my best distance" explanations were sought.

"I wanted that record," she said, "At the start I drove instead of striding. You win a few and lose some. I blew it."

A husky male athlete who professed interest (professional, indubitably) in her said, "If she gets the baton and has to make up five yards in the relay, watch her go. She's a tiger."

She took the baton and had half a step on Claremont's Barbara Neufeld in the 440 relay. But Barbara burned and Carol fizzled.

Miss Kitchen has a dream about running in the British Empire Games. To win there, to win anywhere, she may do well to remember that running is only half the battle.

Rocks Wonderful, Woeful In 9-5 Loss to Leaders

By HAL MALONE

You can do a lot of things in 15 minutes. Get married, get divorced and lose a lacrosse game.

Victoria Shamrocks went from wonderful to wonderbust in that span of time Wednesday night at Memorial Arena. They turned a 4-1 first-quarter advantage into a 7-4 half-time disaster. Never a team to shun that kind of hospitality, Coquitlam Adanacs went on to snatch the marbles 9-5.

The Rocks' metamorphosis was so complete that coach Bert Bertoia could have demanded they all take saliva tests or else checked the water jug.

"In that second quarter," Bertoia said, rubbing a hand across his forehead as if to erase the memory, "we were the shots. Not anybody in particular. Just everybody."

How true. They didn't run. They didn't pursue loose balls. Their passing was inaccurate, impossible and incomprehensible. They had no offence, no defence and no sense.

And for once, everything goalie Barry Forbes did was unfortunate.

Before and after that fatal 15 minutes, Rocks, if not masters, were certainly equals.

They scored four goals in 11½ minutes, two by Bill Munroe and singles by Billy Gray (the first shot of his 1966 debut) and Tom Black.

Then Victoria went 38 minutes and 17 seconds before Munroe tipped in his third goal, a feat that won him 10 loaves of bread.

They also hit four goalposts with Merv Schweitzer hogtied. Schweitzer may not have been infallible, as one Victoria spokesman claimed, but he was assuredly adequate. So was Forbes, except for that singular prolonged lapse.

How does a team that held Adanacs to four goals (while scoring six) in their last meeting, surrender six goals in one chapter?

Change of Pattern Baffled Barry

Standing in a pool of his own perspiration, Adanac playing-coach Gordy Gimple offered his intellectual analysis:

"We got mad after the first quarter. We were standing and letting them run. The boys knew it. I just reminded them that this isn't like hockey. You don't lay four men down in front of the goal and keep the other side from scoring.

"You take your man and work on him. And you try and cross up their goalkeeper. For three games Forbes has had our number. We were shooting to a pattern and he was anticipating us. We changed the pattern, like a baseball pitcher mixes his stuff, and we got to him.

"Their offence? I think they put too much emphasis on the Dillons, (Ranjit and Nirmal). They're good, don't mistake me. They played well but they didn't play one of their super games.

"We don't have a star system. New Westminster has Paul Parnell and Cliff Sepka. Tie them up and you stop eight goals. Hold the Dillons and you've got a good chance to beat Victoria. I'd rather have 15 men who can all do the job."

Besides Schweitzer and himself, Gimple had three men who "did the job" well. Alec Carey was three-and-one, Mike Gates was two-and-two and John Surinak was two-and-zero.

Neither of the Dillons scored but Ranjit, as good a stick handler as there is in the Intercity League, had three assists.

The teams meet again Saturday at Coquitlam. Bertoia may not have Lon Restall because of work commitments. But Bob Goss, a new arrival from New Westminster, may play. "I think he will be available, but I'm not sure," Bertoia said.

After that second quarter he was still too stunned to be sure of anything.

Maddocks Minor Puck President

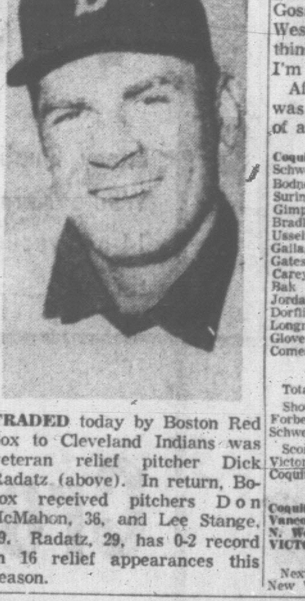
Victoria Minor Hockey Association will have Bob Maddocks at the helm of a new slate slate of officers for the 1966-67 season.

Maddocks succeeds Bob Reid as president.

New officers elected at the annual meeting this week were Bruce Young, vice-president; Bob Thompson, secretary; Chuck Buchanan, treasurer.

Directors are Bert Hickman, George Walton, Dave Stubbs, Ed Hanouski Bram Bowles and Norm Byers.

Frank McComb heads the Pee Wee Pups, Red McLean the Pee Wees, and Gordon Campbell, the Bantams.



TRADED today by Boston Red Sox to Cleveland Indians was veteran relief pitcher Dick Radatz (above). In return, Bosox received pitchers Don McMahon, 36, and Lee Stange, 29. Radatz, 29, has 0-2 record in 16 relief appearances this season.

Greaves Earn Tie On Four-Run Spree

A hitting pitcher, a promising rookie and a returning veteran did most of the damage in an impressive four-run outburst in the top of the sixth for Rawlings of the Senior Amateur Baseball League Wednesday night at Hampton Park.

Rawlings bunched all their runs into one inning before settling for a 4-4 tie with Greaves.

Greaves held a 3-0 lead going into the sixth, when John Martin, a little left-handed hitter who is stroking the ball at a .342 pace in his first season in the league, started the barrage for Rawlings with a home run to right-centre field.

Gary Tuttle, who also collected a single and two walks, followed Martin to the plate and pounded out a home run of his own. Jay Rawlings kept the cart rolling with a double and Chuck Bennett walked to set the stage for pitcher George Brice. Brice smacked a triple to drive in two more runs.

Greaves scored three times in the bottom of the fourth, but they needed one more in their half of the sixth to capture a tie. Jerry Ciochetti scored the tying run on a single by Don Lambourne after reaching first on a fielder's choice and stealing second base.

The game was called at the end of seven innings because of darkness, and will be replayed at a later date.

CLAREMONT ROWERS . . . . . . TACKLE TOUGH FOES

Little Guys Pull Big Oars

By TONY COSIER

Nearly everybody likes to see the little guy come out on top in any contest.

In high school athletics, Claremont has adopted the role of the impressive little guy. Last Tuesday, Claremont (pop. 520) stole the show in the inter-high track and field championships and they are not through yet.

Claremont is the only high school in the area to enter a rowing team into the Pacific Northwest Invitational Regatta to be held Saturday at Shawnigan Lake.

TRAIL BLAZERS

They may not bring back any trophies but they are a good bet to become trailblazers as far as high-school rowing is concerned. Claremont have only been rowing for two years, yet their enthusiasm has already spread to the University of Victoria, whose first year team have also entered into the Shawnigan regatta, and it may not be long before the local high schools begin to take interest in the sport.

Claremont is not satisfied with one team. They have two. The A crew includes team captain Bevan Harrington, Dan Oldfield, Chris Fordham, Bob Hale, and Simon Kendall. The B team consists of Richard Haughey, Greg Randall, Peter Allan, Charlie Gurr and Bill Anderson.

The boys have an experienced coach in Reg Lironi, a teacher at Claremont and president of the Victoria City Rowing Club, who rowed at Ratliffe College and Sandhurst Royal Military Academy in England.

DRILLS THEM HARD

Lironi knows how demanding a sport rowing can be. He has his boys train before and after school five times a week. He has prepared them for Saturday's meet by putting them into competition against other rowing squads.

"We have already rowed against a number of schools including Brentwood College and University School, as well as the University of Victoria, and we have always managed to hold our own so far," Lironi said.

The Shawnigan regatta, which will start at 10 a.m. and continue until 5:30 p.m., will include 11 events. Races are scheduled between eight-man crews, four man crews (with cox and without cox), pairs and singles.

There will be two divisions in the meet — a Senior division made up principally of university and club squads, and a Junior division which will bring high school teams into competition.

STIFF COMPETITION

Claremont's A team will compete in the senior division and can expect stiff competition from a University of British Columbia crew already in training for a European tour in September. Lake Washington Rowing Club, and University of Victoria are also expected to enter along with a team from Shawnigan Lake, the host school, whose senior crew had had many fine races this year.

Lironi expects a good showing from Claremont's B team in the Junior division on the basis of recent performances.

"Our B team has been getting some excellent times," said Lironi. "In fact, the B crew rowed faster than our A crew in Tuesday's contest against University of Victoria's A and B teams."

The junior division will include teams from St. George's School in Vancouver, Lakeside School of Seattle, Greenlake Rowing Club from Tacoma, and Shawnigan, Brentwood College and George Bonner High School from Vancouver Island.

Convalescing Phil Has Healthy Bat

Associated Press

Rich Allen can't throw over 60 feet, but he's having no difficulty hitting over .400.

Philadelphia's star third baseman, who missed 20 games with a dislocated right shoulder, is recuperating in the outfield.

Allen drove in four runs—three of them with a 447-foot home run—Wednesday night as the Phillies rallied for a 7-4 victory in the second game and completed a sweep of their doubleheader against Chicago Cubs. Philadelphia won the opener 4-3.

It was Allen's second 400-foot homer since returning to the lineup last week. He's had nine hits in 30 swings and shows a season's average of .338. With him back, the Phils have won six of eight.

Allen's shoulder is still not right. "I might be able to get the ball 60 feet if the game depended on it," he says.

Rather than play him at third base where he'd have to throw across the infield, manager Gene Mauch has put Allen in left field and assigned shortstop Bobby Wine as his caddy.

On every ball hit to left, Wine races out to relay Allen's weak throws.

Willie Mays hit his 517th career homer as San Francisco Giants edged Atlanta Braves 4-3, Los Angeles Dodgers blanked St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 on Sandy Koufax' seven-hitter, Houston Astros shut out Cincinnati Reds 2-0 and Pittsburgh Pirates downed New York Mets 3-1.

After Allen's homer, Wine broke the tie with the first of two doubles and then the Phillies pulled away.

In the first game, Tony Taylor's eighth inning single brought Bill White home with the winning run.

Mays' two-run homer in the first inning was an inside-the-park shot that broke off Mack Jones' glove as he and Hank Aaron collided. Willie McCovey followed with a solo homer and Jim Davenport hit one in the sixth.

Mays' homer pushed him within four of Ted Williams, who is third on the all-time list.

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference announced the signing of veteran import tackle Ron Payne and rookie Canadian end Barry Taylor. Taylor, 6-1, is a brother of former Calgary flanker Bobby Taylor.

Would you believe May has sifted by, June's here, and the big tournaments are just around the corner?

The City Amateur march starts Sunday, and hard on its heels follows the Pacific Northwest Golf Association championships.

The PNGA tournament falls on July 4-9, and tournament chairman Craig Harmon of Seattle predicts the entry file will be "completely filled" by the deadline date of June 20.

Last year's champion, George Holland of Overlake, is among the early entries for the men's amateur event to be played at Colwood. Other noted amateurs entered include Mike Davis of Portland, Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver, Dick Williams, Wimpy Sargent, Dr. John Harbottle and Mike Evans, all from the Seattle-Tacoma area.

PAT HARBOTTLE

The women's championship, to be played the same week at Uplands, also shapes up to be a most interesting affair with entries from defending champion Pat Harbottle, Edean Ihlanfeldt, Gayle Hitchens, Rita Weihe and Janet MacWha.

* * *

With the coming of the PNGA tournaments and the National Associaton of Left-handed Golfers to follow July 17-22, there will be a need for good caddies.

Boys interested in bag-toting are asked to register immediately for special caddy-training classes to be conducted by the NALG.

Classes wil be held June 10, starting at 6:30, at four Victoria courses—Uplands, Gorge Vale, Cedar Hill and Colwood.

It may be news to Arnold Palmer, but a psychiatrist says there is literally an "emotional explosion" in the golfer's famous swing.

Dr. Arnold J. Mandell of UCLA says that, by and large, all varieties of golf swings and game performance have a hidden significance. They all are designed to strengthen a given player's particular means of "coping with tension."

He recently told the American Psychiatric Association: "The 'smash it' school represented by Palmer and others may be the way of acceptably converting tension into useful range.

"Ben Hogan's meticulous and ritualistic commands for the player, in his writings, may well fit the obsessive-compulsive's need to operate within a well-elucidated framework of being correct in order to reduce tension.

"The superstitious adherence to a ball brand, a particular putter, a warming-up ritual, or a specific cap are perhaps used by us all to invoke the oldest tension reducers of life—religion and magic," said Dr. Mandell.

If you say so, doc . . .

SHORT CHIPS: Lex Sutcliffe, who came oh-so-close to scoring an ace in the Times Island Open final against Ron MacLeod, rolled one in the other day, on the 14th hole at Gorge Vale . . . Also scoring a hole-in-one, same day, same hole, was Brian Lindsay . . . Ivy Blunt, who teed off this morning against Shirley Naysmith in a city women's semifinal match at Uplands, tells the saddest putting story of the year . . . During the recent B.C. parent-child tournament at Gorge Vale, Mrs. Blunt's son, Bill, drove the par-four sixth green . . . They proceeded to five-putt the green for a double-bogey six!

Some of the finer details for the big tournaments coming to Victoria next year will be revealed tonight at a reception at the Victoria Golf Club . . . The 1967 events are the Commonwealth matches (at Oak Bay) and the Willingdon Cup and Canadian Amateur tournaments (at Colwood) . . . Saturday is the start of National Golf Week . . .

A scheduled vacation trip to Eastern Canada did what Victoria seniors couldn't do—beat senior button-holders Larry McCooey and Roy Johnson . . . The Colwood combination was forced to give up the buttons after 12 successful defences when Johnson went on vacation . . . Latest big-name to fall into the Canadian Open hat is Billy Casper . . . Golf's second-highest money-winner of all time has filed his entry for the Canadan Open, to be played at Vancouver's Shaughnessy Club Sept. 29-Oct. 2 . . . Casper's last appearance in Vancouver was in 1958 when he finished second in the B.C. Open . . .

Kay Tribe lost her touch with a putter Wednesday and became a spectator in the city's women's golf championship.

Mrs. Tribe was eliminated 4 and 2 by Lil Thirlwell in the quarter-final round at the host Uplands club.

Her elimination followed a sparkling first medal round 84 and a less comforting second medal round 89 which cost her medal honors by one stroke to Shirley Naysmith.

Mrs. Naysmith was tight to the cup Wednesday, winning 7 and 6 over Gorge Vale clubmate Isobel McIntyre. In other championship flight matches Colwood's Eileen Anderson ousted Kay Liddell of Uplands 7 and 6 and Ivy Blunt of Gorge Vale defeated Nanaimo's Ruth McNiven on the 19th.

FINAL ON FRIDAY

Opponents in today's semis were Mrs. Naysmith and Mrs. Blunt, Mrs. Anderson and Mrs Thirlwell.

The final will be played Friday at 10 a.m.

This year's tournament entries totalled 80, 18 fewer than last year. But Mrs. J. H. Todd, Island president of the B.C. women's golf division, explained two important women's competitions are scheduled for Victoria next month.

The Pacific Northwest Golf Association tourney for men and women will be played July 4-9 at Royal Colwood and Uplands.

B.C. women's championship is scheduled for Victoria Golf Club on July 18.

Gorge Surges Into Big Lead

It's beginning to look like old times in the Inter-Club Golf League.

Gorge belters, who ruled the roost until the Uplands crew took over for a three-year title run, appear headed for another championship.

When they reached the half-way point of the current league schedule Wednesday night, George had extended its lead to 7½ points over second-place Uplands.

Getting a big win for the second successive week, Gorge blasted Colwood 8-1 Wednesday night at Gorge Vale to follow up last week's 8½-½ thumping of the defending champions.

Playing on their home course in Wednesday's other match, Uplands swingers kept hopes alive by downing the third-place Victoria club 5½-3½.

Fast finishes by most of the Gorge players helped produce the big point spread after Colwood had made a promising start.

Highlight of the Gorge surge was provided by Laurie Carroll, who chipped in for a birdie on the 17th hole. The spectacular shot clinched a singles win over Laurie Kerr and nailed down a four-ball victory for Carroll and Lex Sutcliffe over Kerr and Ricky Kent.

The father-son, pro and assistant pro pair from Victoria saved the Oak Bay team from a rout. Paul Trapp defeated veteran Bob Morrison 3 and 1. Vaughan Trapp downed Eric Wright and teamed with George Bigelow for a four-ball win over the Uplands due of Wright and Don Billsborough, who halved his singles with Bigelow.

Results:

VICTORIA 3½ AT UPLANDS 5½

Bill McColl beaten by Bob Hunt 5 and 4; Doug Munro beaten by Eric Hibberson 2 and 1; Hibberson and Hunt won the four-ball 1 up.

Vaughan Trapp defeated Eric Wright 3 and 1; George Bigelow and Don Billsborough halved; Trapp and Bigelow won the four-ball 4 and 3.

Paul Trapp defeated Bob Morison 3 and 1; Ron Scott-Moncrieff beaten by Frank Scroggs 2 and 1; Morrison and Scroggs won the four-ball 3 and 1.

Glasgow Club Nips Hotspur

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Scotland's touring Glasgow Celtic racked up its second straight exhibition soccer win over Tottenham Hotspur of London by a 2-1 margin here Wednesday night.

Celtic won 1-0 two weeks ago in Toronto. The teams play Saturday in Vancouver.

More than 11,000 fans in Kezar Stadium saw the Scottish team go ahead in the 25th minute, Bertie Auld driving in a loose ball that got away from a Hotspur back.

Spurs tied the game a minute later on a penalty kick by Dave Mackay. The winning goal, by Bobby Lennox, came at the 14th minute of the second half.

TOPSOIL

By far the cheapest and best for your lawn and shrubs. If applied as top dressing (one yard for every 600 sq. feet) it will, after three yearly applications, develop a thick and lasting turf that feels like a soft carpet. This is how good and lasting lawns used to be made. One yard of our weedfree topsoil, costing about $4, contains over 225 lbs. of organic matter and minerals. In comparison, one sack of chemical fertilizer, costing about the same amount, contains only about 10 lbs. of plant nourishing minerals. Simple arithmetic thus proves that good topsoil is by far the cheapest and best plant nutrient for lawns, both new and old ones.

Most important of all, good topsoil is not "a shot in the arm" but IT LASTS!

The price of weedfree topsoil is such that considering the cost of deweeding and the health hazards involved, TOPSOIL THAT IS INFESTED WITH WEEDS HAS NO VALUE AT ALL.

Hotspurs Have Earned Fair-Play Reputation

When supporters of London's famous Tottenham Hotspur club claim the Spurs play soccer hard, but fairly, you have to believe them.

Tottenham's record is proof that the club plays hard and talented football.

Founded in 1882 and one of England's richest teams, the Spurs have four times won the Football Association Cup and twice captured the English League's first division championship.

When Tottenham won both the cup and league title in 1961, it was the first time in this century the feat had been accomplished and only the third time in history.

Among the many other awards collected by the white-shirted Spurs is the European Cup of Cup Winners, in 1963.

Evidence that their reputation for clean play has been well earned is supported by the fact that when Frank Saul was sent off the field during a match with Burnley last December, he was the first Tottenham man to be sent off in a league game since 1928.

Saul and his Tottenham mates will be demonstrating their skill at Vancouver in two matches during the next six days.

Spurs clash with Scottish champion Glasgow Celtic at Empire Stadium Stadium Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and meet the B.C. All-Stars next Wednesday.

Among the 17 players travelling with the Spurs are Scottish international goalie Bill Brown, Alan Gilzean, Dave MacKay, Maurice Norman and Terry Venables, recently acquired from Chelsea for a fee of almost $250,000.

TORONTO (CP)—Bob Wilson, who scouted Bobby Hull for the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, has been named head scout and farm team director of the San Francisco Seals, new NHL entry.

The appointment was announced by Rudy Pilous, the Seals' general manager.

Wilson was head scout in Chicago when Pilous coached the Black Hawks. He joined Boston Bruins of the NHL after Chicago released him.

TITLE SHOOT SUNDAY

Benchrest Boys Need Ability to Drill Dimes

Drilling dimes at 100 yards with rifle bullets may sound like fiction, but that's just about what a fellow must be able to do in order to win a benchrest shooting title.

And that's the kind of shooting that will be on display Sunday when trigger experts take aim at the Vancouver Island benchrest championship at the Esquimalt Lagoon range of Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association.

All residents of Vancouver Island are eligible to compete for the crown. Shooting with a benchrest and sandbag support and using any conventional rifle, they will fire 10 shots each at 100 and 200 yards.

Game club members will also compete for the club title and Tackhammer Trophy at Sunday's shoot. The clubmen will contest four matches and will be restricted to rifles conforming to Vancouver Island Shooting League regulations.

Shooting starts at 1 p.m.

ISLAND ROUNDUP

Negligence Ruled Out

NANAIMO—A jury here Wednesday found Lawrence Lawson not guilty of criminal negligence in the Dec. 28 traffic death of Donald Olson.

The 10 men and two women instead returned a verdict of guilty on a lesser charge of dangerous driving. Lawson was remanded for sentence.

Earlier, defence counsel Bob Goseltine told the court in his final summation that the perpetrator of the accident was the dead man himself.

"There was no lighting. Due to a grade in the road, witnesses couldn't see the light of the car until it was 100 feet away.

"If they could not see the lights then the driver could not see them. They were in dark clothing on a dark night," he said.

Earlier evidence was that Olson was walking down the road with several other people when struck by a car which they had earlier refused to ride in because of erratic driving.

CROFTON — The local ratepayers' association Wednesday protested to municipal council about the dumping of septic tank effluent in Crofton garbage dump.

The association said the dumping was being done by a private commercial company.

Reeve Donald Morton reported he had investigated the situation and found the company an alternative dumping site.

He said: "I have checked with the health inspector and anyone doing this work is rendering a public service.

"It is easy to criticize someone doing this work but I feel council must try to look after him and see that he stays in business."

DUNCAN — Eugene Peter Webster, 512 Margaret Street, Alberni, suffered possible broken ribs when he crashed his car into the back of a truck this morning.

The accident happened two miles north of here on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Webster was headed south when he hit the rear of a North Cowichan municipal truck being driven by Christopher Sked.

Webster's car cannoned off the truck into the ditch and is a total loss.

Webster was taken to King's Daughters' Hospital, Duncan.

A passenger in the car, Martin Charlie, 6th Avenue, Port Alberni, suffered a broken leg.

A second unidentified passenger was taken to hospital for a checkup.

Truck driver Sked was unhurt.

Impaired Driving Brings $300 Fine

James Bangay of 1181 View was fined $300 on a charge of impaired driving when he appeared in central court Wednesday.

In addition his licence was suspended for four months.

Court was told Bangay was checked by police early the morning of April 29 when the car he was driving mounted the curb on Johnson near Broad.

Garbage Brings Complaints

CHEMAINUS — Municipal council was told Wednesday of a "great number of complaints" about garbage only being collected once every two weeks in Chemainus.

Chemainus Ratepayers' Association wrote to council saying these complaints had been voiced over a number of years.

The association requested garbage collection twice a week, during the summer months.

Reeve Donald Morton said: "There's an easy solution if the people are willing to pay for it."

Coun. Elaine Dobbyn said there are ratepayers in a number of districts of the municipality willing to pay for increased garbage collection service.

She said twice-a-week service must be on an all-year basis to make it economical for the operator.

Council endorsed in principle the idea of twice a week collection but referred it to the finance committee to work out its application.

Driver Perjury Hit

KITCHENER (CP)—A Kitchener magistrate said Monday that "at least four people out of every five are deliberately perjuring themselves" when they give testimony on the amount of alcohol they have consumed before driving. Magistrate J. R. H. Kirkpatrick, speaking from the bench, said that, although all drivers suspected of having consumed alcohol are offered the test by police, the more wily types refuse it, and the court is not allowed to take cognizance of the refusals.

Fire Protection Request Shelved

SALTAIR — Because it could mean the cost of a new fire truck, North Cowichan council Wednesday stalled a Saltair request for fire protection.

Council had recieved a 237-name petition from residents in the unorganized Saltair district.

The petition asked for fire protection by Chemainus Volunteer Fire Department.

It said the Saltair Water Board was prepared to raise the neecssary mill rate if a plebiscite was passed.

Reeve Donald Morton said: "Perhaps it isn't as simple as it looks. The fire department may not wish to co-operate."

Coun. John Cannon, chairman of the fire prevention committee, said: "It must be understood that on a humanitarian basis the Chemainus Fire Department is fully prepared to give Saltair fire protection.

NEW TRUCK

"But there are a number of financial aspects to be explored before council can take action.

"It could prove disadvantageous to Chemainus fire protection area. It will necessitate the buying of a replacement fire truck and costly expenditure."

Coun. George Whittaker also wondered if extending the Chemainus protection area would detract from the present service.

He said: "A larger number of firemen would be needed."

Mr. Whittaker asked if Saltair couldn't provide its own fire department.

The reeve said it was an understood thing if Saltair could organize itself properly the municipality would try to provide them with fire protection.

Council is to get more information on the matter and write to the department of municipal affairs regarding the mechanics of a plebiscite.

Reeve Morton said this was the first formal request Saltair residents have made for protection although it has been talked about for years.

Lack of fire protection in Saltair district was tragically brought home to people last November. The house of a widow was burned to the ground because firefighting equipment had not turned out promptly.

Ladysmith volunteers only turned out after prompting by the RCMP, and Chemainus members were unable to beat the blaze.

Crump Asked For Park Site On Waterfront

PORT ALBERNI—Mayor Les Hammer has appealed to N. R. Crump, head of the CPR, in an attempt to obtain a small park area on the city's waterfront.

Previous appeals by the Navy League and Rotary Club have failed.

Mayor Hammer said in a letter to Mr. Crump: "I am personally appealing to you on behalf of the citizens of the Alberni Valley to make this last remaining park area near the waterfront available to the city."

In return the city would develop the park fully and name the park for the company or as the company desired.

HIGHER BANK INTEREST OPPOSED

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — After five months of behind-the-scenes arguing, the cabinet and Liberal caucus remain divided on what to do with the interest ceiling on bank loans, party sources said Wednesday.

The disagreement is reported to have persisted at a long cabinet meeting Tuesday and another discussion was set for today's meeting. Some progress toward a compromise solution was made, however.

Some observers see the bank battle as a test of strength between aspirants for the eventual succession to Prime Minister Pearson.

Meanwhile, introduction of the revised Bank Act in Parliament is being put off from week to week. The crucial act was to expire a year ago but it has been extended twice, the latest one until Dec. 1.

Even if the Liberals unite behind a draft bill, the legislation faces a long, rough ride in Parliament. Opinion ranges all the way from rural MPs who attack bankers fiercely to senators who double as bank directors.

FAVOR PARTIAL REMOVAL

Liberal informants say Finance Minister Sharp and Trade Minister Winters favor a partial removal of the six - per - cent limit on interest charged by the eight chartered banks.

The limit would be abolished altogether on bank loans of $25,000 or more, which account for about two-thirds of the total amount.

Loans under $25,000 would be subject to a flexible ceiling, which would fluctuate with market conditions and could rise to 6½ or 7 per cent in "tight money" situations.

The policy and strategy split centres on the proposal for a floating limit on small loans. Mr. Sharp is refining this formula in hopes of winning wider acceptance.

External Affairs Minister Martin, Defence Minister Hellyer and former finance minister Walter Gordon are said to be opposed to higher interest rates on small loans.

FEAR REPERCUSSIONS

They fear the change would drive up interest rates charged by near banks and other lenders, already charging more than the banks. They also fear the political consequences of hitting the average voter in the pocketbook to help the banks compete more effectively in the money market.

By coincidence or by design, the five central figures in the Liberal debate all are considered potential candidates for the party leadership whenever Mr. Pearson decides to retire.

Mr. Sharp and Mr. Winters already have disagreed publicly with Mr. Gordon's proposals for strong government action to limit foreign ownership of Canadian industries.

The Sharp-Winters forces argue for increased competition between financial institutions as demanded repeatedly by the banks and as recommended a year ago by the Porter royal commission on banking.

They also argue that foreign investment is essential to continued growth in Canada, while advocating incentives for more investments by Canadians.

The conflicting economic ideologies likely will clash at a Liberal policy conference here in October.

LESAGE
. . . 'Wagner didn't lie'

LEADERS FIRING FINAL BLASTS

Lesage Demands Paper Retract Charge

QUEBEC (CP)—Attacks and denunciations were handed out by three party leaders Wednesday night as the campaign for Sunday's provincial elections entered its final stages.

In Drummondville, Premier Jean Lesage calld on the Montreal Star to retract an editorial which he said implied that Justice Minister Wagner lied and prepared false reports about Arthur Vachon, president of the Quebec Provincial Police Association.

He told an election rally of 1,500 that The Star implied in an editorial Wednesday that Mr. Wagner lied when he said the QPP Association president constituted a "security risk."

"I repeat, Vachon is a risk to the security of the state and the RCMP has a file on him," the premier said.

Mr. Vachon was fired from the QPP last month.

Mr. Lesage later moved into the home riding of Daniel Johnson, Union Nationale leader, and delivered counter-charges against attacks he said were being made on the Liberal party.

The Union Nationale "sigh nostalgically for the past when they were masters of the province," he told a meeting of 2,200 in Acton Vale.

The separatist Rassemblement pour l'Independance Nationale, on the other hand, "to molest their victim must draw him away from his own family."

The Ralliement Nationale are "charlatans who believe they are better off making false money than they would be working."

Mr. Johnson told a rally of 3,500 in Quebec City that Premier Lesage will lose Sunday's election "because he tried to betray the French-Canadian nation."

The premier would have "incarcerated" his people by supporting the Fulton - Favreau formula for amending the Canadian constitution, Mr. Johnson said.

"We know you have had enough of the mud-throwing at French - Canadians." Nobody could convince the Union National leader that politicians in other provinces were "100 per cent pure."

He told a Montreal social club earlier that taxes and assessments levied by the Liberal government could reduce personal initiative and drain off private savings.

With all the natural resources in the province and all the means at hand to increase their value, there was no reason for poverty and misery in Quebec, he said.

A crowd of more than 4,000 jammed a 3,200-seat arena in suburban Montreal North for a rally by Rassemblement pour l'Independance National. Another 1,000 gathered outside the arena.

RIN Leader Pierre Bourgault attacked Mr. Lesage for a "policy of improvisation which makes us pay two or three times more for services than we need."

In an earlier address to students at Laval University's Technological Institute, Mr. Bourgault said he admires the educational reforms started by Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie.

The RIN, however, "will do more and act even faster in the field of education. It's a priority for Quebec."

'MILITARY TRIUMPH' GOAL OF U.S.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—Senator J. William Fulbright, chairman of the U.S. Senate foreign relations committee, said Tuesday the United States is pursuing a policy aimed at military victory that may require 1,000,000 U.S. soldiers in Viet Nam.

Fulbright, an Arkansas Democrat, said at a press conference that U.S. policy in Viet Nam "as I see it" seeks military triumph instead of a compromise or negotiated peace.

Canada Among Few

Military Draft Commonplace Around World

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Compulsory military service in one form or another is commonplace around the world. Britain, Canada and Japan are among the few countries that have none.

The questions of who is drafted, who is deferred and who is exempt have become major issues in the United States and Australia as a result of the Viet Nam war. These also are issues in many other countries whose troops aren't fighting anywhere at the present time.

An Associated Press survey shows:

In Italy, the son or brother of someone killed in a war cannot be drafted. The oldest or only grandson of someone with no unmarried children also is draft-exempt, as is the oldest son in a family of seven or more children.

France grants an exemption if a member of the potential draftee's family was killed "in the service of the nation."

In The Netherlands, if two sons have been drafted, all others in a family are exempt.

A Syrian can avoid conscription if he is an only child.

FIGHT TRIBESMEN

In Iraq, whose government has been waging a costly anti-guerrilla war against Kurdish tribesmen for several years, emergency regulations passed in March require service of anyone 18 to 50 who has not already been in the armed forces.

Switzerland has no exemptions except physical or mental disability.

South Africa's government, which maintains a policy of strict racial segregation, drafts only white males. After nine months of active duty, the South African remains in the reserve until he is 65.

Mexico is one of the rare countries that doesn't defer students, but draftees train only on Sundays.

The Soviet Union drafts youths 17 to 18 who have finished high school and those 19 regardless of whether they have finished.

College students receive military training during the school year and also spend periods in training after their second and fourth years.

In the United States, citizens must register for the draft at age 18 and maintain a draft card until age 35. Generally, however, no one over 26 is drafted.

U.S. RECLASSIFIES

Deferments are granted to university students, those in essential defence industries, and to persons who belong to the national guard (militia). However, due to the Viet Nam crisis students in the lower sections of college classes are being reclassified for service.

All males in China are subject to the draft at 18. Those who enter the army serve for three years, those in the air force four and in the navy five.

All Chinese men must serve in labor forces, and they receive some military training in the "people's militia." High school and college students are required to do manual labor for a month every year.

Most West Germans fulfil their military commitment after they finish high school and before they start college.

Other countries that require military service include Formosa, South Korea, Turkey, Belgium, Spain, Denmark, Norway, Austria, Malaysia, the United Arab Republic, Argentina, Brazil, Venezuela and Colombia.

Among those without any draft law are Uruguay, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Jordan.

Washer Woman Hits

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP)—A woman walked into a bank Tuesday, handed a teller two rolls of quarters, and asked for $200 in paper money. The teller later unwrapped the rolls and found two rolls of aluminum foil and washers—with a quarter on each end of each roll.

U.S. WITHDRAWS BIDS TO BRITISH SHIPYARDS

LONDON (Reuters)—A British defence military spokesman said today the United States has withdrawn bids open to British and American shipyards to build tugs and minesweepers for the U.S. Navy.

Britain had hoped the sale of the ships and other naval and military equipment to the United States would partly offset the cost of buying 50 American F-111 jet fighter-bombers for £2,100,000 ($6,300,000) each.

The American Bureau of Shipping's decision to withdraw the bids for four harbor tugs and an unspecified number of ocean minesweepers came suddenly and without explanation, the spokesman said.

RED CARPET TREATMENT FROM STORE

Soviet Maids in Shoplifting Spree

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three little maids from the Soviet ship Skriplev went shoplifting in Vancouver, got caught, and got the red carpet treatment.

The merchant decided not to prosecute. What's more, city police who investigated the case drove the three women back to their ship—then apparently lost their report on the incident.

The tale of department store diplomacy started 10 days ago, and came to light only Wednesday.

The Russian women were crew members aboard the largest of three Soviet scientific fishing trawlers that put into Vancouver for supplies and repairs May 18.

While Canadian authorities hassled with Russian embassy officials in Ottawa as to whether the ships should be here at all, the trio went ashore and lost their judgment in a department store.

They picked up—but failed to pay for—goods valued at $21.45. A carefree Canadian shopper nearby turned out to be a store detective.

The Russian captain of the Skriplev—he insisted he was an admiral — was contacted and said he'd look after the matter. But he said he didn't think any Western - style publicity would help the cause of international goodwill.

The store agreed, a store spokesman said Wednesday, and dropped charges. The ship sailed the next day.

QUEBEC ELECTION ENTERS DEBATE

Minister Under Fire Over Strike

OTTAWA (CP)—The opposition demanded more information about the issues in the Quebec longshoremen's strike Wednesday as the New Democratic Party charged that Labor Minister Nicholson has only given the management side.

Meanwhile, NDP Leader Douglas said the cost of living and automation are responsible for the growing number of labor disputes and will be far more.

He and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said they want a full account from Mr. Nicholson. They did not get it as the labor minister declined to make an opening statement and time ran out.

Mr. Diefenbaker indicated he will move today that the Commons adjourn regular business to debate an issue that has come up in the Quebec provincial election campaign—the firing of Arthur Vachon from the Quebec Provincial Police and his record.

Premier Lesage has said Mr. Vachon, president of the Quebec Provincial Police Association, is a security risk with an RCMP file.

POSES QUESTION

Mr. Diefenbaker asked how the Quebec government got hold of an RCMP file and questioned the use of RCMP information in a provincial election by a provincial government "to destroy someone to whom it is opposed."

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Royal) asked whether armed forces will be sent into Quebec during the provincial vote Sunday if the QPP go on strike.

Prime Minister Pearson said such action is taken only on the request of a pro[illegible]e and no request had been [illegible]de.

Mr. Douglas moved adjournment for a special debate on the longshoremen's strike in view of waterfront violence at Montreal Tuesday and the harmful effect on exports of the strike, now in its 25th day.

He withdrew the motion after the government promised to bring up the labor spending estimates for 1966-67, providing another avenue for immediate debate.

CITIES REPORT

Mr. Douglas said a recommendation of the Freedman report on railway automation should be applied in the longshoremen's contract dispute to settle what he called a main issue—the proposed layoff of 15 per cent of the workers.

The recommendation, dealing with automation, is that when technological change means reduction of a labor force, some benefits of the change should be passed on to older workers in the form of retirement benefits.

Mr. Douglas said Labor Minister Nicholson misled the Commons by saying the 15 per cent to be laid off by the Shipping Federation of Canada are casual workers—students or taxi-drivers—rather than longshoremen.

The NDP leader said Gerard Tremblay, an official of the International Longshoremen's Association in the Atlantic region, says the men are mostly older longshoremen who can only work part time.

He also questioned Mr. Nicholson's assertion that "fantastic" wage increases were being offered the longshoremen.

WHO MADE OFFER

Had the wage offer Mr. Nicholson referred to been made by the shipping federation or by the labor minister as a basis of negotiation?

Mr. Douglas said the only information the Commons has had on the strike has come from Mr. Nicholson "and his statement of Monday last sounded like a press release from the shipping federation."

"If the minister wants to pose as the spokesman for the employers then let him get into (a other) department and not stay in the labor department when he is supposed to be unbiased and impartial.

"The minister has not given the House the facts."

Strike by Police Averted

QUEBEC (CP) — Agreement was reached early today, heading off a strike of Quebec Provincial Police scheduled for noon today, a Quebec Provincial Police Association spokesman reported.

He said the demands of the association had been met. Government negotiators agreed to recognize the group as bargaining agent for QPP members and to implement a checkoff of union dues.

Terms of the agreement say that with the association's recognition as being truly representative of the 2,300-member police force, it will be allowed to conduct negotiations through an intermediary body with the government.

Robert Burns, chief association negotiator, said a membership list now is being prepared but it is known through a preliminary count that the association represents between 1,800 and 2,000 members of the force.

The agreement provides for the establishment of a committee, made up of equal numbers of persons appointed by the association and the government, which will deal with matters such as length of the work week, salaries and vacations.

Recommendations of this committee will be made to the lieutenant - governor - in -council or the justice minister.

There was one point on which the negotiators did not come to agreement. Government spokesman asked that non-commissioned officers, who now belong to the association, be required to join a separate body. The lawyers representing the association were against this proposal.

At the end of the negotiations, which began Tuesday night, the negotiators said this matter will be studied by them at the beginning of next week.

The government agreed that the association, to be financed by payment of dues only, will be allowed to have these dues deducted under a voluntary check-off system. That is, deducted directly from the pay cheque.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1966—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

Last week in this corner, we discussed the problem facing the student teacher who has completed his first two years of training and must now decide whether to plug on along the rocky academic road, or help ease the B.C. teacher shortage as a temporary schoolmaster or marm.

Obviously, this question called for a Solomon's judgment, so I passed it on to those best able to deal with it.

The result has been a batch of phone calls and letters from experienced teachers, and a remarkably even division of opinion.

Some, but not all of the older teachers who remember their grim depression-day struggles for an education are strong for staying on.

"If funds are available," urges E. V. H. "go back and get your degree with my blessing.

"Basic education for teachers is ever escalating and very soon a degree will be a must. Financial gain, not to mention academic superiority, will quickly make up for two short years in university.

"In this time, you will mature in thought and tastes and choices. You will gain confidence and be more skilled in handling youngsters."

★

That's one viewpoint, offered by a teacher who began her training in Normal School and rounded it out later with summer courses at UBC.

Now for another, presented in a brisk letter by W. C. Barrell of Esquimalt Junior Secondary:

"Since British Columbia has no teacher intern program (and it should have) my advice to the student is: 'by all means take your temporary certificate and get out and teach.'

"Good teachers are made, not born, and they are made in the classroom, not in the university."

Mr. Barrell goes on to assure the rookie that he won't lack for help from his seniors in the profession.

"He will have experienced teachers near who will be ready with help when asked and a sympathetic principal to keep a close eye on his progress. He will make mistakes and he will have to find the answers but in doing so he will learn what no college, however good it may be, can teach him about classroom situations."

Further, Mr. Barrell suggests, the young temporary certificate holder who takes the plunge now rather than later will learn whether he truly wants to teach.

★

Next note to hand urges at least a third year of university training, pointing out that "it's hard to get back into the study groove once out of it," and that "after a year of teaching, especially the first, should come a real vacation."

Sounds sensible; but in comes a young man who has taken the other approach. He gained his permanent certificate at summer school and emphasizes the travails of the beginner who invades the classroom with "an overload of theory and very little practice."

These opinions I've quoted, and others for which I'm no less grateful, seem to indicate that it's dealer's choice and that it will remain so until our teacher training procedures undergo certain radical changes.

Some of these are already in the works. I'm told that Uvic education faculty is planning long-range revisions, one of which will be drastically increased emphasis on practice teaching. Next fall, third-year students will leaven their courses with classroom observation tours and substitute teaching assignments.

But the eventual answer may come through a teacher intern program as proposed by Mr. Barrell and to be introduced on a limited scale by rural Saanich and Sooke. There, picked non-education faculty graduates who wish to teach will be allowed to glean credits on the classroom firing line.

It seems to me that an expanded version of this earn-as-you learn system might solve the teacher trainee's dilemma.

Longshoremen Quit Work As Ship Leans With Load

Longshoremen at Ogden Point walked off a British freighter this morning after she listed dangerously, spilling part of her cargo onto the dock and into the water.

At press time the ship's crew was working frantically to right the ship.

The 13,000-ton Huntsland began to list Tuesday as the last of her super-cargo was loaded above deck.

By this morning she was tilting at a five degree angle and still listing.

Longshoremen's business agent, Stan Ball, took one look at the situation and called the 65 longshoremen working her onto the dock.

He then informed ship's captain, F. Richardson, that his men would not resume work until the ship was straightened.

At one point, the ship's booms, which angle out over the side, were less than a foot from the roof of a dockside warehouse.

At the same time, an aft rail gave way, toppling hundreds of two-by-fours into the water and on to the dockside.

SEVERAL HOURS

The Huntsland was to have sailed this afternoon with some 6-million board feet of lumber for United Kingdom ports.

But it was expected to take several hours before water could be pumped into starboard tanks to right her.

A ship's spokesman said the damaged rail would probably have to be repaired before she finally sails. Only a month ago, a similar incident at Port Alberni cost one longshoreman his life, when the freighter Archangel spewed most of her super-cargo into the water.

Said Mr. Ball: "We decided then that it was too dangerous to load ships when they are listing at more than three degrees.

"Only yesterday at a meeting in Vancouver we discussed what to do when this sort of situation arises."

Free Legal Assistance Given 313

Victoria lawyers provided free legal assistance to 313 applicants last year.

A report to the annual meeting of the Victoria Bar Association Wednesday said that the applicants were involved in 56 criminal proceedings and 257 civil litigations.

Legal aid chairman M. D. W. Young told the Times today that in 127 cases summary advice was given to applicants. In 68 civil cases and 36 criminal cases lawyers were assigned to represent the applicants.

He said legal aid is offered where the applicant is destitute. Persons involved in criminal matters are referred to the bar association by various welfare agencies.

Persons involved in civil matters may apply by attending Victoria Law Courts at 5 p.m. any Wednesday. A panel of lawyers meets there at that time to screen applicants.

There has been an average of two referrals a week to local lawyers.

In criminal cases the attorney-general's department accepts part of the cost of the service.

The bar association re-elected Alan Macfarlane, Oak Bay MLA, to a second term as president.

The driver was alone when his car collided with a boulevard tree.

High Costs May Force Single Medicare Plan

B.C. Subsidies Key to Future

By JOHN MIKA

The province's 11 private medicare plans today may be looking at the first glint of a scissors which eventually will cut them off and send all subscribers into the B.C. Medical Plan operated by the government.

The two blades that possibly could cut deep into their present business:

Rising costs and Premier Bennett's determination to keep BCMP rates at present levels by increasing subsidies if necessary.

Officials in both the B.C. Medical Society and one of the leading private plans, interviewed today both said at the moment the government premiums for individuals pose no threat because the group-plan rates, usually sponsored by employers, still are lower.

But they conceded that if costs continue rising for the private plans and the government uses subsidies to keep its premiums down, the day may come when it will be cheaper for every employee to join BCMP as an individual rather than stay in his company plan.

IN BACK DOOR

If that day comes, British Columbia will have a single government medicare plan in operation on a voluntary basis and with the help of the doctors even though they want to see a multiplicity of plans remain.

It could be viewed as government medicare introduced quietly through the back door.

The indications this may be coming lie in the impending increase of up to 10 per cent in doctors' fees Jan. 1 to be followed within two years by what now looks like a similar boost. Other costs for the private plans also are likely.

These inevitably will force ever-rising premiums to meet the expenses.

FEE INCREASES

But Premier Bennett Wednesday confirmed that the $14 million in this year's budget for BCMP includes an amount to take care of the fee increase and he will pour more subsidies if necessary in future to keep the rates at their present level.

In fact, while describing the BCMP as the "best plan in Canada," he said he will seek federal contribution to the provincial plan under the proposed national health plan to be started next summer — and this would give him more funds for cushioning the effects of rising costs on his premium level.

Ironically, it was the agreement last June by B.C. Medical Society with BCMP for a precedent-making contract which ties the doctors' payments from the plan to a composite wage-living cost index for the first time that will bring the automatic raises in fees next January and in January, 1969.

Dr. E. C. McCoy, executive director of the medical society told The Times this morning that he doubts the doctors have agreed to a device that is bound to put BCMP into a competitive advantage with private insurance plans.

"But I haven't the slightest idea what the long-range picture will be," he added.

GROUP RATE

"The group rate premiums now charged by MSA and the others are still far below the government's individual-rate premiums.

"But if the government keeps picking up the increases that will come over the long range by subsidizing its premiums, then they could become cheaper even than group rates.

"But I don't think this is what the premier means. As I understood the reports, he just plans to increase subsidies to cover the Jan. 1 increase," said Dr. McCoy.

BETTER SERVED

Dr. McCoy emphasized that doctors felt the province would be better served if there were a variety of medicare plans available, and he said they certainly hoped no government would undercut the other premiums so it dominated the field.

"The government plan fills the gaps for the sick, the poor and the old (who often are barred from private plans) and that's what should continue," he said.

However, Premier Bennett said the government rates will continue to be subsidized "as much as necessary" to keep the premiums within reach of all persons who need covrage on an individual basis. In addition, special subsidies will be available for persons with less than $1,000 taxable income.

He said the government knew its agreement with the society meant there would be a fee increase next year and in 1969 and

BUT NO ROOM AT THE INN FOR WOLFGANG

Jaycees Open Biggest Convention

By GLEN ALLEN

Dedication is a man named Wolfgang Sholz.

One of 600 expected at the B.C.-Yukon Junior Chamber of Commerce convention opening in Victoria today for four days, Mr. Sholz and his companion Boots, are in for a spartan sojourn.

A Jaycee president for Coast Skeena district, Mr. Sholz and his dog drove to Victoria from Kitimat in 36 hours and plan to bunk together in the family van during the conference.

Mr. Sholz explains that travelling expenses were formidable enough without putting out for beds at a local hostelry.

Besides, although Boots is the perfect gentleman, it's not every inn that will find room for him.

Coast Skeena district is one of 45 represented at the biggest provincial Jaycee convention ever to be held.

Today's convention opening events began at the Red Lion Inn with the provincial Jaycee oratorical finals at 10:30 a.m., followed by several hours of Jaycee business and at 3:45 p.m. a parade through the city.

The parade, made up of among other things the Esquimalt trolley, a giant cowboy hat manned by the New Westminster contingent, Victoria area school marching bands, Miss Victoria, and 14 floats, began at the CPR wharf, followed Belleville to Douglas, went along Douglas to Caledonia and ended at the arena.

Friday's activities will be devoted to more Jaycee business, a stag luncheon and a dance at Crystal Garden.

Saturday Jaycees and their wives, after awards luncheon at the Racquet Club will meet at Government House where Lieut.-Gov. George Pearkes will host a cocktail party for the province's young businessmen and tradesmen organization.

At 9 p.m. the president's ball will be held at the Racquet Club.

Major business at hand will include debate on new resolutions and elections.

Victoria Jaycee president Brian Small is a candidate for provincial vice-president.

The convention will end after a final business meeting Sunday morning, again at the Red Lion Inn.

Convention chairman and incoming Victoria Jaycee president Grant Johnstone said 100 Jaycees from Washington, Oregon and Idaho are among those here for the convention.

●

About 700 Jaycees opened a three-day convention in Victoria today but some of the delegates began painting the town Wednesday.

Three of the delegates were spotted spraying an election campaign plug over a sign beside the Pat Bay Highway and the West Saanich Road.

Conrad Nostwald of Prince George was given one hour to remove the green paint from the sign.

TAKING BREAKFAST with Boots, the unofficial but hard-travelling Jaycee mascot, is visiting Kitimat Jaycee Wolfgang Sholz. Pair will share camper van for four-day provincial Junior Chamber of Commerce convention which began at Red Lion Inn this morning. Among 600 expected are Jaycees from B.C., Yukon, Washington, Idaho and Oregon.

HONOR CITIZEN HUNTED

Wanted — nominations for Victoria's Good Citizen of 1966.

They should be addressed in writing to Good Citizenship Award, 232 Irving Road, Victoria, before June 18.

Nominations must give reasons why they think a particular man or woman in Greater Victoria should be named Good Citizen of 1966. The qualification is voluntary service to the community without pay.

Eric Brettell was named named Victoria's Good Citizen for 1965; Mrs. Agnes McVie won in 1964.

The award has been made annually for 35 years by the Native Sons of British Columbia, Victoria post.

BLACKOUT CAUSED BY KITE

B.C. Hydro issued an old warning with new emphasis today:

Don't fly kites on city streets.

Sudden death in the form of high-tension wires, bearing no insulation, is threaded through almost every street in the residential areas.

Wednesday evening Gino Bressau of 316 Moss flew a kite for his daughter Bonnie. It had a wooden frame and was covered with metal foil.

It crossed two wires in a 12,000-volt power line. The short circuit broke the line. It hit the lawn and driveway like a hissing snake.

BLACKOUT

The heat cracked the pavement, set some bushes afire and blacked out a large section of Fairfield.

The break in the line threw an overflow of juice into a transformer. It exploded and more wires came down. It was two hours before service was restored.

Hydro officials today said normally a broken wire would cause switches to trip, killing the line. But this one remained energized for nine minutes.

A tragedy could have resulted had anyone been under the falling wire — or if Mr. Bressau's kite had been held by wire.

The only part of town where this hazard does not exist at all times is in the 30-block downtown area where all wires are underground.

B.C. Hydro issues an annual warning about kites through the press. No campaign has been launched in the schools. Officials said they believe the schools teach about this danger themselves.

FEW OUTAGES

"There aren't many outages from kites. But we take a lot of kites off lines," says an official.

Mr. Bressau is worried that he might get a bill for the damage. The Hydro is considering such action.

"He is very fortunate," said the official "whether or not he gets the bill. He's still alive."

Vancouver Man Takes Jaycee Talk Contest

Winner of the B.C.-Yukon Junior Chamber of Commerce oratorical finals this morning at the Red Lion Inn was Don Gordon, a 34-year-old sales representative and member of Vancouver Jaycees.

Other finalists were Dave Else, 25, of Duncan, who was in a serious automobile accident one hour before the speak-off, held at 10:30 a.m., and Jim Kelly, 26, of Kelowna Jaycees.

All spoke on the problems of the Canadian Indian.

Motorcycle Daredevil In Plunge

The daredevil motorcycle aerialist who thrilled crowds at the Jaycee Fair here two weeks ago was injured Wednesday when he fell while performing his act in Port Alberni.

Rudi Berg, a veteran high-wire man, is reported in "good" condition in West Coast Regional Hospital today with minor injuries as a result of his 30-foot fall.

RCMP say he was revving his 300cc motorcycle to the top of a 100-foot high wire when the tracked front wheel slipped off.

The bike jammed on the wire and he plunged to the ground.

His partner, Julianne Neff, managed to remain clinging to the trapeze which is suspended below the bike.

LEFT HANGING

Earlier in the week the same thing happened when the pair had reached a point just short of the 100-foot tower.

Rudi and his partner were left hanging for about one hour before Port Alberni Fire Department rescued them with an aerial ladder truck.

When he was in Victoria he said in an interview he accepted danger as part of the job but he would only be doing it for another five years and then would retire.

Man Jailed Six Months For Thefts

A man who was spotted stealing a radio, camera and a pair of gloves from a tourist's car Wednesday was sentenced to six months in jail today.

Lyle Henry of no fixed address pleaded guilty in central magistrate's court.

Police said the accused turned over the stolen articles to a man on Douglas Street who asked him what he was doing in the unlocked car with the Ontario licence plates.

Henry was then followed to a beer parlor where the witness had a chance to phone police.

The accused had a record of six previous theft convictions.

"It doesn't appear you ever intend to learn from past experience," Magistrate William Ostler told him.

Ask The Times

Q. Is there an association for owners of antique cars in Victoria? C.P.

A. Yes, Victoria has a Vintage Car Club, mailing address 1252 Wharf St., which meets the second Monday of every month at Morrison Motors, 3050 Douglas.

Q. Which body of water is properly called James Bay and which the Inner Harbor?

A. There has long been dispute about this point. On early maps James Bay is shown as that body of water which the Empress Hotel is built, and the Inner Harbor as that stretch beyond the Johnson Street, bridge. But authorities on Victoria nomenclature agree that both names now are taken to mean the same thing, that is, the entire harbor area.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Feathered Friend Due For Visit With You?

By PENNY SAVER

Is the stork on your agenda for this summer? No doubt you have been preparing constantly for the joyful visitor, with provisions for the new arrival, and cool outfits for yourself. One way to get ahead of the stork is to spend a few hours behind the "thread curtain", sewing a wealth of frocks and outfits to make you cool this summer. There is no end to the outfits you can create to make you the loveliest "lady-in-waiting" ever.

There's a clever trick that I found in one shop, selling for 69 cents. It's for you energetic girls who are whizzes behind the sewing machine. This item is a stretch panel that you just insert into the front of slims or a skirt. It has a special feature. Besides being flexible and easy to install, these have a cord so that the size is adjustable.

The colors are wild—they come in flaming red, pale blue, black, pink and other colors to match the shade of the material that you are using.

Thinking of very clever devices, no item surpasses the common safety pin, especially in case of emergency. No household should be without the gigantic blanket pins that I found. These, of course, are just like safety pins, only very large and strong. They are priced at two for 15 cents, and come in very handy. My mother is one who does not go anywhere without at least one of these giants.

One substance that is sometimes hard to find in just the right color that you desire is ink for fountain pens. One store has almost a rainbow of colors in washable ink. It comes in bright red, turquoise, blue black, blue and jet black. Red and green are usually the two hardest shades to find. These bottles sell for 35 cents each. This ink is perfect for any fountain pen.

Do you want to know where Penny shopped? Give her a call at 392-3131.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Good Health and Makeup Cure Dark Eye Circles

Many women are very unhappy because of dark circles under their eyes. This is understandable because these do take some of the bloom from the face. However, like straight hair or a crooked nose, they are not the disasters they once were because something can be done about them.

Lowman

If you have dark rings under your eyes, investigate your habits of life. Loss of sleep can cause them. So can malnutrition. Do you get enough sleep? Do you eat correctly? Sometimes a very sedentary life contributes to this condition. Do you get enough fresh air and exercise and outdoor life? If you are not at fault in any of these ways, a physical checkup by your physician is in order. Often ill health will cause such circles.

VERY often these are inherited. They DO seem to run in families. If this is the case, then makeup is your answer. There are special cosmetics today which will mask such circles — and also shadows around the mouth.

You can get a cream stick in the shape of a regular lipstick, or cream in a jar or you can get the liquid version. Which is best for you seems to be an individual matter, probably due to the texture of the individual skin. These products come in white and also in tinted shades. The white is all right to use under your regular makeup. In fact, you use all of these masking products under your usual makeup.

The masking agent and your makeup base must be sympathetic. In other words both must be either liquid or cream. Experiment to see which goes on your face most smoothly.

If your eyelids are puffy or you have puffs under your eyes, you should be sure that they are not caused by a physical disorder. There also are first aid tricks such as this one from the theatre. Dip two little teabags in hot water and place them over your closed lids. Rewet and reheat them when necessary. This is said to reduce swelling.

If you would like to have my leaflet, "Puffs and Lines Under the Eyes," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Flyer Determined To Keep His Wings

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: After my husband had a close call, he promised me he would quit flying for a hobby, but he sneaks off and flies anyway. He's even lied to our insurance man about it. I know he still flies because when the weather is bad and he can't get home, he has to call me.

I love him, but I've even threatened to leave him. We have four children and I don't want a divorce, but I can't take worrying about him all the time. What is your advice?

FLYING WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: If you can't persuade your husband to quit flying and you don't want a divorce, your remaining alternative is to learn to live with it. Apparently your man is determined to have wings, and from your description of him, he's not likely to sprout any.

DEAR ABBY: I have a sister-in-law who's smart, bookwise, and she doesn't let anybody forget it for a minute. She's a Stanford graduate. Big deal! My complaint: Whenever there is a family gathering, she suggests word games like "Twenty Questions" or "Charades," or something where she can show off how smart she is.

We are a fairly intelligent bunch, but nobody except this sister-in-law is interested in playing these brain games, which are more like contests. She's the bossy type and talks everyone into it every time we get together. How can we get out of playing these games without looking like poor sports?

HATES THOSE GAMES.

DEAR HATES: Speak for yourself. If you don't want to participate in "brain games," say so. And by the way, the rest of the bunch can't be as "intelligent" as you say they are, or they wouldn't permit themselves to be manoeuvred into playing games in which they have no interest. Not consistently, anyway.

DEAR ABBY: This is to further support your comforting statement that the gestation period of a child can be well over 10 months: There was a case in England early in the century in which the husband, an army officer stationed in India, had sued on the ground that the child could not possibly have been his; the gestation period having been nearly 11 months.

The case went to the House of Lords, which is the equivalent of our Supreme Court, and the lady finally won. The decision was, "While it is highly unusual, it is not impossible to carry a child for nearly 11 months."

R. S.

Confidential to J. G. in Abilene: Here's a good rule to follow: If you don't know a person well enough to borrow money from him, don't lend him any.

TODAY'S RECIPE

CHICKEN-ASPARAGUS YOLANDA

Three complete chicken breasts, boned; ¼ cup flour; 2 eggs, beaten, salt and pepper; ½ cup butter or margarine; 1 (3-oz.) package cream cheese, diced, 18 asparagus stalks, cooked; 1 cup dairy sour cream, ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese.

Have the butcher bone the chicken breasts. Pound them out flat. Dip each into flour and then into beaten egg. Season with salt and pepper. Fry in butter or margarine until golden and cooked through—about 20 minutes.

Arrange in heat-proof shallow dish. Cover with diced cream cheese. Place 3 asparagus tips on each. Top with sour cream and sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese.

Place under broiler about 4-5 inches from the flame and cook until cheese browns, about 3-5 minutes. Watch closely. Makes 6 servings.

On the mainland, His Honor will attend a luncheon in the social suite of the University of British Columbia's Faculty Club and, later, the UBC spring congregation and installation of the new chancellor, Mr. J. M. Buchanan. That evening, His Honor, accompanied by aide-de-camp Cmdr. J. Roberts, will open the Kitsilano Showboat's opening show of the season.

Here in Victoria, Mrs. Pearkes will entertain at an afternoon tea in Government House. Her guests will be the hundreds of nurses who are here to attend the reunion that marks the 75th anniversary of the founding of the Royal Jubilee Hospital's school of nursing.

RJH Nurses' Reunion

More than 600 graduates of the Royal Jubilee Hospital's school of nursing are in Victoria this week to attend celebrations marking the 75th anniversary of the founding of the school. Festivities began with a coffee party at the Victoria Curling Club this morning. Friday, after a tour of the city, the RJH graduates will attend a tea, to be given at Government House by Mrs. George R. Pearkes. PREPARED FOR CENTENARY

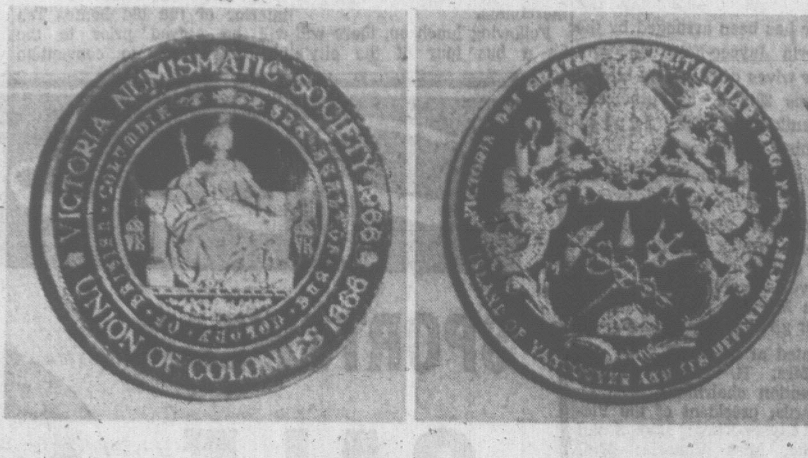
Silver Medal to Tell B.C.'s Tale

By CANDIDE TEMPLE



Two sides of new B.C. Centenary medal stress history of province.

British Columbia's centennial has received a boost from an individual group whose members have a more than ordinary interest in history.

A centennial medal, remarkable for its beauty and historical accuracy, has been produced by the Victoria Numismatic Society.

And while centennial bunting may fade, speeches and torchlight ceremonies be forgotten, this is one centennial memento that will be around for quite a while.

Although a collector's item, and at collectors' prices, the medal is designed to appeal to people who never bother to change.

Researched with scrupulous care, the medal should leave a good deal of centennial history in the mind of the beholder.

Great Seal

On one side of the 1½-inch medal the great seal of the Colony of British Columbia is reproduced, showing a regal Queen Victoria seated on her throne, orb and sceptre in hand.

Flanking her image are coronets and the letters VR (for Victoria Regina), while at her feet are floral emblems of her domains.

On the obverse of the medal is the seal of the Colony of Vancouver Island, an ornate coat of arms authorized for use in 1850 by the "Island of Vancouver and its Dependencies."

The seals themselves tell a tale of the ups, downs and involved negotiations which led to the union of the two colonies in 1866, which the Numismatic Society has recorded on a leaflet accompanying the medal:

Pacific Coast trading rights in territory that is now B.C., Washington and Oregon were owned by the Governor and Company of Adventurers of England Trading into Hudson's Bay.

U.S. Citizens

When American citizens settled in Oregon, it became almost certain that the 49th parallel would become the international boundary.

So in 1843 the Company built Fort Camosun on the south end of Vancouver's Island, and six years later moved its Pacific headquarters there from Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River.

In the same year, 1849, the crown colony of Vancouver Island was created.

For a rental fee of seven shillings, the Company got proprietary rights to the colony and its dependencies for 10 years.

That was the year the colony's seal was created at the request of the Colonial Office in London, by an engraver called Benjamin Wyon.

It was submitted for Queen Victoria's approval, and in 1850 it was authorized for use and sent out to Governor Blanshard.

New Colony

The colony of British Columbia's seal was produced in similar fashion after creation of the new colony in 1858.

Benjamin Wyon, patent owner for production of royal seals, was commissioned to create this seal, too, which was first used in 1859.

But by 1866 the gold boom that was the reason for the newest colony had passed. Both colonies were in financial trouble.

The solution seemed to be union of the two, which came about that year, when territory of the colony of B.C. was extended to include Vancouver Island.

The medal commemorating this union has taken months of careful research by the Numismatic Society's committee of seven, headed by Dr. Stuart Kenning.

Sacrifice Art

A medal rather than a coin was chosen for production so as not to sacrifice art to utility.

Research assistance was also given by provincial archivist Willard Ireland, whose inquiries went as far as the Public Records Office in London, Eng.

A particular problem was posed by the Vancouver Island seal. The die was not in the archives.

It was by luck that numismatist Commander George Gray, RCN (Ret.), a member of the medal committee saw a drawing of the seal on a book cover, "B.C., a History" by Margaret Ormsby, published for the B.C. centennial in 1958.

The medal design was produced from a copy of this and with the B.C. seal the committee had more luck.

An impression was made from the original die which was found in the Provincial Archives.

More searching was needed to establish Benjamin Wyon as creator of the two seals, and the identity of the designer for the Vancouver Island seal is still hidden.

No newcomer to the medal-producing field, the Victoria Numismatic Society created handsome mementoes for the 1958 B.C. centenary and for Victoria's centennial celebrations in 1962.

The previous two medals were struck at the Royal Mint in London, but particular care was taken to have the last one completely produced in Canada.

It was engraved and struck by H. F. Sarson of Pressed Metal Products Ltd. in Vancouver.

The Numismatic Society's stock is at present 300 silver medals, which sell for $6 each, the same number of bronze, at $3.50 each, and a limited quantity of 18-karat gold medals, which are $90 apiece.

Became Final

As yet the Society has only a vague notion of what the demand, from coin collectors and others interested in history, will be, but the medals will be produced only until Nov. 19, the date in 1866 when union became final.

Orders for the medals should go to medal committee treasurer C. F. Lawrence, 811 Lampson.

NEW CONTRACT CRISIS SPARKS MEETING CALL

A special meeting of union officials has been called by the B.C. Federation of Labour to consider the growing contract crisis in the province.

The meeting will be held Sunday, June 19, in Vancouver, federation president E. T. Staley told the Victoria Labour Council Wednesday night.

"We have been requested by a number of affiliates for a meeting to discuss negotiations which are so widespread and the general labor situation," he said.

"The various strategies unions have used and the possibility of getting some (disputes) settled without strike action will also be discussed."

The meeting will follow a federation executive board meeting Thursday, June 16, at which a successor to E. P. O'Neal as secretary-treasurer is expected to be made and a conference on automation June 17 and 18.

DESPITE 'PROVOCATION'

Carpenters Vow To Stay on Job

Carpenters will continue working despite the contractors unilateral introduction of new wages and working conditions, the Victoria Labour Council was told Wednesday night.

"This is a move by the contractors to provoke us into walking off the job so they can call a lockout," said John Schibli, president of Local 1598 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

"We won't be provoked regardless of what changes take place. We will continue on the job."

CONDITIONS 'CUT'

Mr. Schibli said although wages have been raised by 15 cents an hour "there is a wholesale cut in conditions."

He said contractors had "a gall" in putting the new terms into effect when carpenters rejected these terms by a 97 per cent vote during negotiations.

He said carpenters will stick with the union demands "and get a good and proper settlement."

The union is seeking a 35-hour work week at no reduction in pay plus an extra 30 cents an hour over two years.

The shorter work week has been rejected by contractors, who also want to eliminate the union hiring system where contractors call the local union office for the men they need.

Burn Centre May Get Aid From Labor

The Victoria Labor Council may assist financially in the provision of a burns unit at St. Joseph's Hospital as its Centennial project.

Delegates to the council meeting Wednesday night instructed the executive to make a detailed study and bring back definite recommendations.

"It would be a worthy Centennial project," said council secretary-treasurer Harry Anderson.

The council and the Victoria Building Industries Exchange have been meeting with the hospital for several months to discuss the proposed unit.

At the council meeting, the burns unit was outlined by plastic surgeon Dr. Paul Gareau and Pat Blewett, assistant administrator at St. Joseph's.

They also showed color slides depicting what severe burns look like and how they can be treated.

SPECIAL EQUIPMENT

Mr. Blewett said a unit for five patients with a special bath and elaborate sterilizing equipment to filter out all germs and bacteria from the room would cost $90,000 and take six months to build.

The federal and provincial governments would pay $50,000 in grants. The remaining $40,000 would have to be raised locally.

He said one construction company has already donated $1,000 and it was up to the labor council to consider how it, through its 70 affiliated unions with a membership of 12,000, wished to handle any contributions.

RAISE $12,000

One suggestion was an assessment of 50 cents a month per affiliated member, to raise perhaps $12,000 to $15,000 towards the local share of the total cost.

Of the total cost, $60,000 would be for renovations and $30,000 for the special equipment.

Dr Gareau said a two-year survey showed an average of 5.4 beds are needed at any one moment for the treatment of burns.

"I am not talking about household burns but the more severe burns where the patient must be hospitalized," he said.

The bulk of these are industrial injuries — burns caused by heat, electricity, chemicals and radiation.

PROTECTED

Because the skin is killed by the burn, the patient was "particularly susceptible" to infection.

He could be protected by sterilizing equipment and a special bath to facilitate the removal of dressings.

"The hospital requires some help if it is going to get this unit," he said.

"We hope to get patients out more quickly — and keep them alive."

He Counted, Then Court Decided Outcome

A man who gave his wife and a woman friend "to the count of three" to open the door of the friend's apartment Tuesday night and then broke into the apartment appeared in central court Wednesday on charges of forcible entry and assault.

John Gagnon, 93 Southgate, who left his apartment to seek his wife in the neighboring apartment of Mrs. Kathleen Gallin pleaded guilty to both charges.

Police said Mr. Gagnon broke the lock and the night chain on Mrs. Gallin's door and slapped her on the cheek.

Magistrate Ostler ordered Gagnon remanded in custody to June 9 for a pre-sentence report.

Beware of Ladies!

Magistrate Ostler told a man fined $15 in central court Wednesday on a charge of allowing his dog to run at large, to beware of ladies who are wary of dogs.

Ben Eddison, 3259 Maple, whose dog approached a woman and her dog the night of March 29, causing the woman to fall off the curb was told "dogs cause alarm especially with ladies."

Mr. Eddison pleaded guilty to the charge.

Tribute Paid Worker

A familiar figure on the local labor scene has resigned as chairman of the Victoria Labour Council's unemployment committee because of ill health.

Robert Noble has also had to resign as delegate from the Machinists, Engine Fitters and Helpers, Local 3.

Tribute was paid him by council secretary - treasurer Harry Anderson and E. T. Staley, president of the B.C. Federation of Labour.

Extradition Hearings Completed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Extradition hearings against a Vancouver man, now residing in San Francisco and wanted here in connection with a $1,000,000 construction swindle, were completed Tuesday in magistrate's court.

Vancouver police are seeking extradition of John Blandy Jenkins, former controller of City Construction Ltd., to face seven charges of obtaining money by false pretences and seven charges of procuring funds with false statutory declarations.

The case involves awarding of a $1,600,000 federal government contract for construction of extensions to airport runways at Cold Lake, Alta., in 1959.

Police say the contract was awarded to City Construction, which in turn hired a number of Alberta sub-contractors to do the work.

Transcripts of the extradition hearing will then be forwarded to Ottawa, processed, and sent to Sacramento, Calif., for the start of U.S. proceedings.

SOLUTION RESTS WITH WORKER, COUNCIL TOLD

Resolutions 'No Substitute' for NDP Gov't

Paper resolutions are no substitute for election of New Democratic Party governments, the Victoria Labour Council was told Wednesday night.

"We can help ourselves instead of sending in resolutions," said Jack Groves of the International Woodworkers of America.

"If people would sit down and do some clear thinking and study the parties in Canada they can come to only one conclusion: Put an effort behind the NDP and get them elected and we'll not have to send in these resolutions."

The president of the B.C. Federation of Labour, E. T. Staley, agreed.

"The solution rests with the Canadian people and the Canadian worker," he said.

"The time to make that decision is at the polls. You can send all the resolutions you like — unless we prove by the way we mark our ballots we're still going to be jiggling around with it."

The resolution in question was submitted by A. H. Goldemeester of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators.

It asked the Canadian Labour Congress to mount a campaign to institute a capital gains tax and an excess profits tax to finance needed educational and chronic care facilities.

He said corporations are making "fabulous profits" and there are large sums earned by these corporations and businessmen on which little or no tax is paid.

"I am not advocating their money be confiscated," he said. "I just ask that they pay a larger amount for young and sick Canadians."

In defence of the resolution, which was passed, he said there isn't any hope of getting "our friends" into power unless the public is made aware of what is wrong.

If all the labor votes went one way it might not be enough. If others were acquainted that something is wrong "maybe they would come along with us."

Council vice-president Jack Driscoll said all should make sure they are on the voters' list so they can actually vote when and if an election is called.

Sussexvale Leading Navy's Whaler Race

Still leading the field and within hailing distance of home in the navy's Gabriola Island-and-return whaler race is the lone entry from the HMCS Sussexvale.

She spent the night at Maple Bay, with two crews from HMCS St. Croix and one from HMCS Saskatchewan vying for second-home spot lying overnight within a half-mile of each other at Kuper Island.

The fifth boat, from HMCS Saskatchewan, with a crippled rudder, is well behind at Yellow Point.

The navy reports that with another day's fair wind today the winner could reach the finishing line at Esquimalt Harbor this afternoon or one day earlier than planned.

The race was designed to provide seamen with an extended test of their navigation, seamanship and pioneering abilities.

The whalers are equipped with an outboard motor, but sail and hand power is to be used, barring emergency.

Colquitz Band Sets Concert on Weekend

Colquitz Junior Secondary School band will put on a concert in Beacon Hill Park at 2 p.m. Sunday.

The program will include Somerset Sketches which won the band first place in their class at the recent International Band Festival at Abbotsford.

They will also play the tone poem Scandinavian Fantasy which won them an ovation at the Greater Victoria Music Festival.

For the youngsters the program will feature the theme from Pink Panther and the popular song Tijuana Taxi. Highlights from My Fair Lady and Ballet Parisienne will be included.

The band consists of 56 students ranging in age from 13 to 16 under the direction of Emile Michaux.

The band will also play Sunday afternoon, June 12, on the lawn of the Empress Hotel at the request of the Saanich Jubilee Committee.

Another Two Months Added to Sentence

Gordon R. McKay, 2665 Florence Lake Road, was sentenced to two months in jail on two charges of obtaining lodging by fraud when he appeared in central court Wednesday.

The sentence is to be added to a six month sentence he is already serving for similar offences.

An RCMP constable said McKay had passed worthless cheques of $16 and $8 to pay for accommodation at Campbell River Lodge in Campbell River in May and April.

ROARING HUGH TO TOUR CYCLE COURSE

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis will ride the course before starting the first motorcycle race Sunday at Beaver Lake Park.

The reeve, who admits to doing his own motorcycling "quietly," will also present the trophy to the winner of a variety of events being staged as part of the Diamond Jubilee celebrations.

Events will start at 2 p.m. and last about two hours. They will include scrambling, jumping, trick-riding and formations.

BRIDGE LESSON

By JACOBY AND SON

This business of being careless about the play of the second trick is not confined to average players. Lots of experts are inclined to play too fast when the hand appears to be a cinch.

Opening lead—♦ J.

At both tables in an important match in England the bidding and play of the first two tricks went quickly and identically. Each declarer won the diamond opening with dummy's ace and led a trump to his ace. West was unkind enough to show out and play slowed down to a turtle's pace.

Eventually, each expert led a heart to dummy's queen. Then each led a heart back toward his won hand and played low after East produced the nine.

The East players proceeded to do a little celebrating of their own and came up with the killing lead of the queen of trumps.

The unfortunate Souths won their kings and had the choice of death by hanging or shooting. They could ruff one losing heart in dummy but that play would establish East's nine of trumps and they would wind up losing one trump, one club and two hearts or they could pull East's last trump and lose three hearts and a club. You can't make four spades if you lose four tricks and both experts went down.

If either South had stopped for some real study before leading that first trump he would have had no trouble making his game. He would simply have led the queen of hearts from dummy to make it impossible for two trumps to be led before South was ready to ruff some hearts. Of course, this might have lost against some very bad break in hearts but there was less chance for it to happen than for the actual distribution.

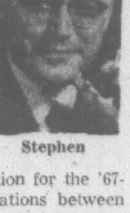
Andy Stephen Looks at TV

There is a great deal of concern being built by American networks at the reluctance of Hollywood television production companies to enter into development deals for the 1967-68 television season.



Stephen

The reason is simply price. They are sitting back waiting for others to make deals first so that some idea may be obtained of the price pattern.

CBS-TV is the first network to feel the drawback. It is a bit behind in its plans for the season after next, though has some 22 projects on the boards.

Another concern of the networks is the possibility of a writers' strike against the industry.

If the scribes walk out, pilot production for the '67-'68 season would be hampered. Negotiations between the networks, producers and Writers' Guild of America on a new agreement, to replace the current one which expires June 15, has made no progress in meetings so far.

But deals can always be threshed out at the bargaining table. It's the price of production which is the man stumbling block.

Beverly Hillbillies may be corn and may not have won any awards from the industry, but it continues to be a favorite of viewers. The May 8 Nielsen ratings list the program in second place behind the perennial leader, NBC-TV's Bonanza.

Other shows following in order were Red Skelton Hour, The Lucy Show, The Andy Griffith Show, Green Acres tied with Griffith, Bewitched; a special, "The Magic of Broadcasting," The Man From U.N.C.L.E., The Dick Van Dyke Show and Gomer Pyle tied with Van Dyke.

Breaking it down by network, CBS-TV took seven out of the first 10 spots, NBC-TV had two shows in the top 10 and ABC-TV one.

* * *

TIDBITS: A TV sports special on the life of sportscaster Tom Harmon is on the drawing boards. Harmon's football career was fabulous. If it goes, Bing Crosby will handle narrating chores.

Jackie Gleason couldn't come to terms with his one-time Honeymooner wife, Audrey Meadows, but she has signed to guest in Red Skelton's Clown Alley on CBS-TV. She will also be in his first show of the new season.

. . . MOON PEBBLE FILMS

Some are much less than an inch. There are craters, one 10 feet across about 25 or 30 feet from the spacecraft."

The camera was shut down when the earth's rotation blocked signals to Goldstone and officials said no further pictures were expected until 8:30 p.m. PDT tonight when Goldstone again is in position to receive. Meanwhile, tracking stations at Canberra, Madrid and Johannesburg were to make engineering checks with Surveyor.

Some shots were expected to be better in quality, experts say, than the nine pictures sent back by the Soviet Union's Luna IX last Feb. 3.

Surveyor's feat was regarded as a significant advance over Lune IX, which scored after at least four failures. The Soviet craft was a 200-pound shock-resistant ball containing a camera.

It apparently was ejected several hundred feet above the surface from a carrier vehicle equipped with small retro-rockets. U.S. scientists said its impact probably would kill a man.

Surveyor's main rocket and three guidance rockets slowed its 620 pounds to an estimated 8 miles an hour, then it dropped 14 feet to the surface. Shock absorbers and crushable pads cushioned it. Experts said it apparently was stable all the way down as it balanced on a tongue of flame.

HITS THE SPOT

So perfect was the guidance that the landing was within feet of the predicted impact point in the Sea of Storms, a broad dry plain near the western edge of the face of the moon, just south of the lunar equator. It is one of several areas considered as Appollo descent points.

The success, which brought shouts of joy from workers assembled at the laboratory, launched a seven-shot series of Surveyors during 18 months in a style few had dared hoped for.

One project official had called Surveyor "probably more difficult and complex than anything yet attempted in space by anyone."

Seven shots were scheduled because the chances of success were so slim. Presumably later shots will aim at different possible manned landing areas. Surveyor's ground shots then will be compared with those from the upcoming Orbiter series, which will make photos as a spacecraft skims as close as 29 miles to the surface, and on the basis of this an Appollo site will be selected.

Telescopic pictures from earth show the Sea of Storms landing area as a hundred-mile-diameter plain ringed with ridges. In the southern portion is the 1,800-foot-high Flamsteed Crater. And just north of it is Surveyor's resting place.

One expert at the laboratory, which controlled the flight, said after seeing the pictures: "It looks like they prepared a landing field for us."

He added that one shot made the surface look "like rough asphalt, but it's still pretty smooth."

"I'll bet the scientists who predicted a heavy layer of dust on the moon are committing hari-kari about now."

Treatment Not Prison For U.S. Drug Addicts?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed a weakened but still significant bill today providing for treatment rather than imprisonment of narcotics addicts charged with non-violent crimes.

If approved by the Senate, the bill would mark a turning of the corner in congressional policy toward drug addiction, a first step away from stiff mandatory prison sentences and toward hospital rehabilitation.

The bill applies only in federal courts, but New York and California, which contain about 60 per cent of the more than 50,000 addicts in the nation, have similar laws.

The measure provides that an addict charged in federal court with a crime such as theft could, if he agreed and doctors felt he could be helped, be committed to a hospital for treatment rather than stand trial.

He would be required to remain under treatment for up to three years. If cured, the charge would be wiped off his record. If he went back on drugs, he could be tried on the original charge.

The administration had asked that this pre-trial commitment procedure also cover addicts who sell narcotics solely to finance their own habit. The House rejected this, 198 to 168, but gave courts authority to hospitalize this type of seller after conviction.

Present law imposes mandatory prison terms for conviction of sale or possession of narcotics or marijuana. The House bill repealed mandatory sentences for marijuana offenders between the ages of 22 and 26, but refused to do the same for narcotics offenders not covered by the commitment procedures.

Rebpulcians tried to knock out pre-trial commitment on grounds that it permitted "trade of a crime for a cure" regardless of whether addiction caused the crime. They lost on a standing vote, 77 to 43.

On the final vote of 367 to 1, by which the bill was passed and sent to the Senate, only Rep. Martha W. Griffiths (D—Mich.) voted no. She said she considered the offer of commitment instead of trial a bribe.

Long-Delayed Drug Prices Probe To Open

OTTAWA (CP) — A special Commons investigation of drug prices will go ahead next week, a year to the day after the federal government formally made the commitment to hold such an inquiry.

Health Minister MacEachen is tentatively scheduled as the first witness.

Later witnesses will include Revenue Minister Benson, the Canadian Pharmacists Association, the Canadian Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, the Canadian Medical Association and a number of individuals and private drug firms.

The drug price inquiry has been kicking around Parliament for several years. It temporarily was set aside for a special investigation in 1964 of drug safety and of the hazards of food contamination from insecticides and pesticides.

This aspect of the investigation was completed in December, 1964. The pricing inquiry was revived June 7, 1965, by then health minister Judy LaMarsh, but it never was held although the Commons authorized a special committee to make it.

MEMBERS APPOINTED

The authorization was renewed Feb. 15 this year and a week later the 24 committee members were appointed.

After a lapse of more than a month, the committee met April 26 and elected Dr. Harry Harley, Liberal MP for Halton, as chairman. He headed the previous committee inquiries into drug safety and food contamination.

Another two-week lapse occurred before the committee met May 12 in secret session. The committee approved the hiring of a counsel, Ottawa lawyer A. M. Laidlaw, and an accountant, W. J. Blakely of Kingston. Since then there have been no sessions.

HAS SEPARATE INQUIRY

Meanwhile, the Newfoundland government has established its own investigation of food and drug prices in that province, giving the task to a royal commission without advising the federal government.

This news provoked pressure from the opposition side of the Commons for action by the parliamentary committee.

The committee has unusual features in addition to its slow start.

For one thing it will have counsel — an expert on patent law — to question witnesses and an accountant to check figures of costs and prices. Only rarely has the Commons agreed to provide such facilities and the government to set aside the funds.

In hopes of having a report by the end of the year, Dr. Harley said that persons and organization presenting briefs to the committee have been instructed to send them in a week in advance. This will give MPs a chance to read the briefs and prepare questions.

In addition, the committee goes into operation with a commitment from Mr. Benson that the government will take action if it recommends removal of the 11-per-cent sales tax on drugs.

The commitment almost was unprecedented and was given by Mr. Benson in the Commons in the face of considerable public pressure in the House from government supporters and opposition MPs.

Man Injured As Car Skids On Wet Road

Gordon Ashton of 4240 Raymond, was treated for leg injuries at Royal Jubilee Hospital today after a three-vehicle crash on Oak Bay at Hampshire.

Oak Bay police said a car driven by David Else of 833 Byng skidded on the wet road and was in collision with an oncoming van driven by Mr. Ashton at about 8:30 a.m.

The Else auto also collided with a car driven by Mrs. Lavina Knight of 1841 Gonzales, causing light damage.

Damage to the Ashton and Else vehicles was described as very heavy and estimated at $800 to each.

COUNTERFEIT TRIAL

Undercover Agent Tells of Operations

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial police undercover agent testified Wednesday that he posed as a member of a counterfeit ring to help foil a plot to counterfeit $100,000,000 in United States funds.

Royston Packard, a former technician in counterfeit cases for the attorney-general's laboratory, was testifying at the trial of Carl G. Uteck, 44, of nearby Thornhill, and Marc Jean Therriault, 41, alias John Mark Martin, of no fixed address.

Uteck and Therriault are charged with conspiracy to make, receive and possess counterfeit money. They were remanded to June 10 when more Crown witnesses will be called.

Mr. Packard told Magistrate M. J. Cloney the gang wanted to use his technical skill to make money for export to the U.S.

He said he met Uteck, a salesman for an industrial equipment firm, last Dec. 6 through a friend's introduction. Uteck offered him the counterfeiting proposition three days later.

The money was to be sold through U.S. businessmen who control finance companies.

BECAME AGENT

When he told Vernon Whitley, provincial police deputy commissioner, of the incident, he was advised to play along with the scheme as an undercover agent.

Mr. Packard said Uteck arranged a Dec. 13 meeting with a John Martin, who said he needed $50,000 in counterfeit U.S. bills by Christmas.

"I was to receive 10 per cent of the face value of the bills," said Mr. Packard.

Uteck also told him, he said, "of a friend who wanted $2,000,000 right after Christmas."

"My share was to be deposited in a Swiss bank."

. . . MEDICARE

it drew up its budget accordingly.

Joseph Crosbie, secretary-treasurer of CU & C Health Services, which insures almost 200,000 British Columbians compared with 280,000 covered by BCMP — said his organization still can offer lower group rates than the government's individual rate.

But he admitted BCMP already has taken away almost one-third of CU & C's individual subscribers and now actually has begun nibbling at the group-rate fringes of private plans.

"We know they are beginning to get some people in a few groups where the rates are high and the persons have to pay the full amount—such as executives.

"The government subsidies bring BCMP premiums lower than their rates so some of these people are quitting their group plans and taking out the individual policies offered by BCMP," he said.

Mr. Crosbie said that the highest group rates charged by his non-profit organization — $4.35 for single persons and $12.50 for families—will not be affected by next January's doctor fee increase but will have to be raised in 1969's increase.

OTHER RATES

All other groups rates will have to be raised in January and if the government premiums remain the same this will close the differential considerably.

However, he said employers may increase their portions of the group-rate charges and there probably will remain a natural preference among most workers to stay with company-sponsored plans.

BCMP rates now are $5 for a single person, $10 for a married couple and $12.50 for a family. These are unsubsidized premiums for any person with more than $1,000 taxable income.

INDIVIDUAL PLAN

Medical Services Insurance—the doctor-sponsored individual plan—has rates of $6.25, $12.50 and $18.50 respectively and it admits, along with CU & C, that it has lost many subscribers to the government plan.

The government employees medical services organization—which insures some 21,000 government workers as well as MLAs went into the hole by $70,000 last year while charging rates of $4 and $10 (which the province spilt with employees) and has urged subscribers to be more careful in using doctors because the fees are going up and difficult financial problems may arise.

That's what all the non private plans face.

They can also mediate on Premier Bennett's original promise that any of them who wished could become carriers (agents) of the government scheme — which subsequently was withdrawn so the government alone had the benefit of a subsidized plan.

Mother Creating 'Four-Year-Old Fagan'—Ostler

Magistrate William Ostler said Wednesday a mother's explanation that she shoplifted for the benefit of her young boy was making of her son "a sort of four-year-old Fagan."

Mrs. Laura Hauzer, address unavailable, was fined $150 in central court on a charge of theft under $50. She said she stole a small quantity of goods from Hudson's Bay store because her son was going without.

"You're a very dishonest woman," the magistrate answered.

"You have the effrontery to blame your four-year-old son."

Pointing out that she had been previously convicted for the same offence, he added, "If you keep this up you will go to jail."

would be started as soon as the agreement goes into effect officially, the spokesman said.

Mining will be started in the fifth year and placed on a commercial basis the following year.

The whole of crude oil mined under this project would be supplied to Japan, using the existing pipeline linking Alberta with Vancouver, the spokesman said.

However, in case the cost of producing the oil proved too high to be competitive in the Japanese market, it would be sold locally in Canada, he said.

The Japanese ministry of international trade and industry said the Alberta oil development project was part of a program Japan was launching to develop overseas oilfields with Japanese capital and techniques to promote stable sources of low-priced oil supply.

Other projects under the program include plans for the development of oil resources off North Sumatra, in the state of Sabah, and Australian New Guinea, the ministry sad.

Join Club Of Shyness

By JACK HUTTON

So you're shy?

Meeting a complete stranger throws you for conversational openers. Large noisy parties make you uncomfortable. You look at the popular swingers in your crowd and feel inadequate.

Well, join the club.

You've just joined the ranks of a group that has included Albert Einstein, Abraham Lincoln, George Bernard Shaw, King George VI, Eleanor Roosevelt and Dag Hammerskjold.

The first time that Shaw stood up in public to speak (at a debating club) he could hardly put one word after another. He kept going back every Sunday until he'd conquered it.

And, as he told one of his biographers, "It's like learning to ride a bicycle. You keep falling off until the day when you can stay on. After that it seems natural."

Big Advantage

Lincoln was once asked why he preferred to stay in the background at social gatherings. "It gives you a big advantage," he said. "If you keep your mouth shut people might think you are a fool. But open it and they know you are."

The gentle-mannered King George VI grew up convinced that he would never have to rule the British Commonwealth. It was sheer mental torture for him to prepare his first radio broadcasts, fighting a severe stammer.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who probably logged more travel miles than all but a minority of her generation, never got over her shyness. Yet she carried on fighting for values in which she believed.

I'm writing this column because of two letters that have arrived within recent weeks. Both were from readers who had read a column I wrote months ago on loneliness.

Not That Way

"I can't tell you how comforting I found it to read that psychologists believe the most sensitive years for a human being are probably those between 13 and 20," said one reader, a 16-year-old girl.

"We're constantly told that this is a go-go generation. Somehow you get the outside picture of happy extroverts having the time of their lives. It just isn't that way at all."

The second correspondent, a 17-year-old Grade 12 student, said he would like to see a future column on shyness. "It's something that I think I've just begun to conquer," he wrote. "But it's something that seems peculiar to my age group."

My friend, it's not peculiar to your age group. The person who can truthfully say that he has never known a moment of uncertainty in his life is either a liar or an extremely rare type.

I'll never forget giving a lecture on jazz 10 years ago. The thought of being nervous never occurred to me until the split second I stood up. Then my voice turned to a squeaky stammer, my stomach did flip-flops and my hands started to shake.

Nervous

The fact that the audience of about 50 was trying not to notice only made it worse. I remember a flower-hatted lady whispering behind her hand to a friend: "He does get nervous, doesn't he?"

Nervous? I was petrified. Yet the same thing didn't happen again in more than 100 times that I've sat on panel discussions, spoken to small groups or appeared on TV. That doesn't mean that it won't.

Are there any ways to fight shyness? There are, I think, four time-honored tips.

- Be yourself. Never try to be something you aren't. You're actually a pretty nice person, you know. Let people accept you for what you are — not an artificial front.
- The fastest way to make people interested in you is to be interested in them.
- Become involved in some activity that will require you to project and be involved with people — a club, sport or local drama group.
- Finally, just remember you're not alone.

Witch-Doctor Collects Other Half of Bill

ADDIS ABABA (Reuters)—The services of a witch-doctor were successfully employed by the British embassy in this Ethiopian capital to ensure fine weather at the embassy garden party in honor of the Queen's birthday.

Sir John Russell, the British ambassador, who has employed the same witch-doctor on previous occasions, personally met the costs of the operation which amounted to 20 Ethiopian dollars (about $8.50).

Addis Ababa had been plagued with almost continuous rains and the day before the garden party it poured.

"I tore the $20 bill in half and gave one piece to the witch-doctor," Sir John said. "I promised him the other half if there was no rain at the party. I gave it to him later and consider he did a jolly good job of work."

The garden party, attended by more than 600 guests, took place in blazing sunshine.

Smokers More Liable

VANCOUVER (CP)—Smokers apparently are more liable to common colds and other respiratory infections than non-smokers.

A year-long study of student nurses at Vancouver General Hospital—half of them smokers—showed that each smoker averaged 2.3 more days respiratory illness than the non-smoker.

Nurses were used because they live under conditions where they have to report all infections, said Dr. Donald Anderson, associate professor of preventive medicine at the University of British Columbia, who conducted the study.

He said that for some time it was generally believed smokers were more susceptible, but until now no evivdence was available.

Both groups recovered from simple colds in about the same time, but the smokers took twice as long to recover from bronchial infections.

FALL MARRIAGE?

Bride Ignores Groom

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Chi-Chi, a prospective panda bear bride from Britain, sleeps side by side with her Russian fiance — with an iron grille decorously separating them.

This is just about the only sign of interest the reluctant Chi-Chi shows in Moscow zoo's male, An-An, keeper Bella Nogina said today.

As Miss Nogina spoke, An-An bleated through the grille to Chi-Chi but gained no response. Chi-Chi concentrated her efforts on chewing sugar.

"She's always like that," said Miss Nogina. "She only looks at him when we feed him first."

Chi-Chi arrived here from London zoo March 11. Early attempts to bring the pandas together ended in failure when, said eyewitnesses, they showed "aggressive tendencies."

The nine-year-old black-and-white pandas, natives of China, had not seen another member of their species for some seven years, and their initial antagonism was not unexpected.

Zoomen here hope that by the fall when the twice-yearly panda mating season comes round, the marriage can take place.

Yes, It Was Windier in May Says Weatherman

Victoria had some record-breaking weather in May.

We had the highest average wind speed since 1959; an average of 13.5 miles per hour.

On the 4th and 5th we had the highest temperatures ever recorded here on those days—72.8 and 86.2, respectively.

And on the 27th we had the coldest temperature ever recorded on that date, 39.4 degrees.

The weather station on Gonzales Hill also reported a mean temperature for May of 52.6 which was 1.5 degrees below normal.

There was a rainfall for the month of .93 inches which was .03 above normal.

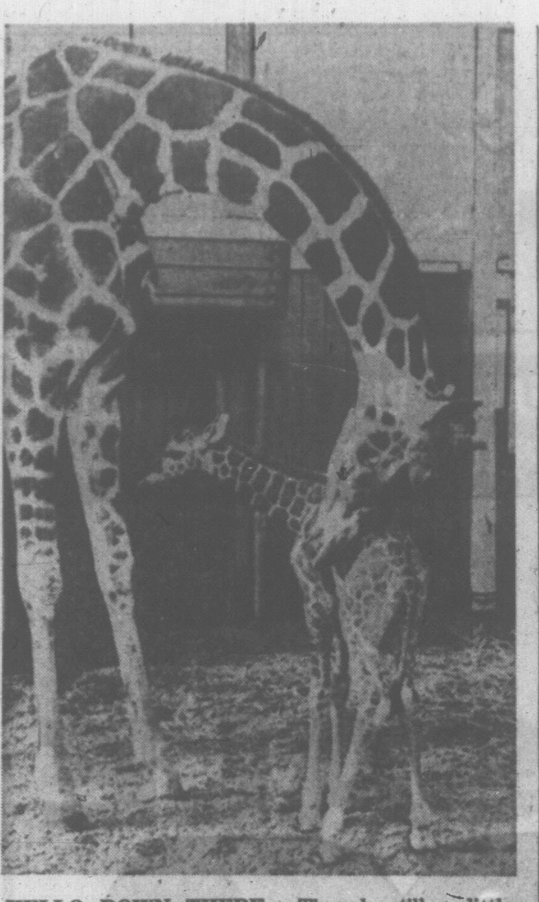
And there were 314.1 hours of bright sun — 39.1 hours above normal, suggesting May didn't know where it was going.

Prince George Official Named

The Municipal Officers Association of B.C. Tuesday elected C. A. Jeffery of Prince George its new president.

Other officers elected during the 27th annual conference at the Empress were: Vice-president, G. H. Carroll, Richmond; secretary-treasurer, L. H. Ormiston, West Vancouver; executive members, J. Youngberg, Richmond; N. E. Woodward, North Vancouver; James Sawyer, Alberni; A. Selbie, Kinnaird; J. E. Niebert, Qualicum Beach; H. W. Cooper, Penticton, and J. A. Currie, Kitimat.

The three-day conference ended this afternoon.



HELLO DOWN THERE—Though still a little wobbly on its long legs, the first giraffe born in Seattle's Woodland Park Zoo is nuzzled by its mother, Duchess, a few days after birth. The baby, as yet unnamed, stands five feet tall. Mama is 13 feet, 6 inches. Duke, the 15-foot poppa, was off somewhere getting something to calm his nerves. Baby was born Sunday after a 419-day pregnancy. (AP Wirephoto.)

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Jenifer Lewis, age 8, of San Bernardino, Calif., for her question:

Are there canaries on the Canary Islands?

Chances are your sweet-singing canary bird never visited the Canary Islands. But some of his ancestors may have lived there long ago. Perhaps they learned to sing there in the warm mountain forests, but the islands were not named for them.

There are 13 of the little islands. They lie in a warm part of the Atlantic Ocean about 60 miles from the shores of northwest Africa. In ancient times people were not brave enough to sail their ships very far from land. The Atlantic Ocean was a terrifying place right up to the time of Columbus. But the Canary Islands were close enough to land to be discovered long before this.

The sailors of ancient Rome knew about them and Roman reporters wrote about them. And it was the Romans who named them. The visiting sailors noticed that big, fierce dogs ran wild on some of the islands, but if they noticed the canary birds they said nothing about them. The Roman name for dog was canis and they named the group of islands Canaria, meaning the land of the dogs.

Later the name Canaria was changed to the Canary Islands. And later the sweet-singing birds were found on wooded hills of certain islands. These songsters of the Canary Islands were called canaries. Most wild canaries have feathers of drab green or murky yellow and their wild songs sound like flocks of cheerful finches. In fact they are related to the pretty finches and some of their relatives once lived in North America.

Pet Canaries Trained

The wild songsters of the Canary Islands were tamed and trained and in captivity their plumage changed to sunshine yellow. They enjoyed captivity and sang their very best for their human friends. Their voices became far better than those of their wild cousins, and their singing improves with almost every new generation. The first pet canaries were captured and trained in the Canary Islands and sent to Europe more than 400 years ago.

The wild dogs have long since departed and people live on only seven of the 13 islands. Less than a million people make their homes there, but ships pass by on their way down the African coast and many travelers stop to visit. The islands belong to Spain and are divided into two provinces, each with its own capital. The people who live there grow flowers, fruits and vegetables and sometimes the visiting ships take their produce to the markets of Europe.

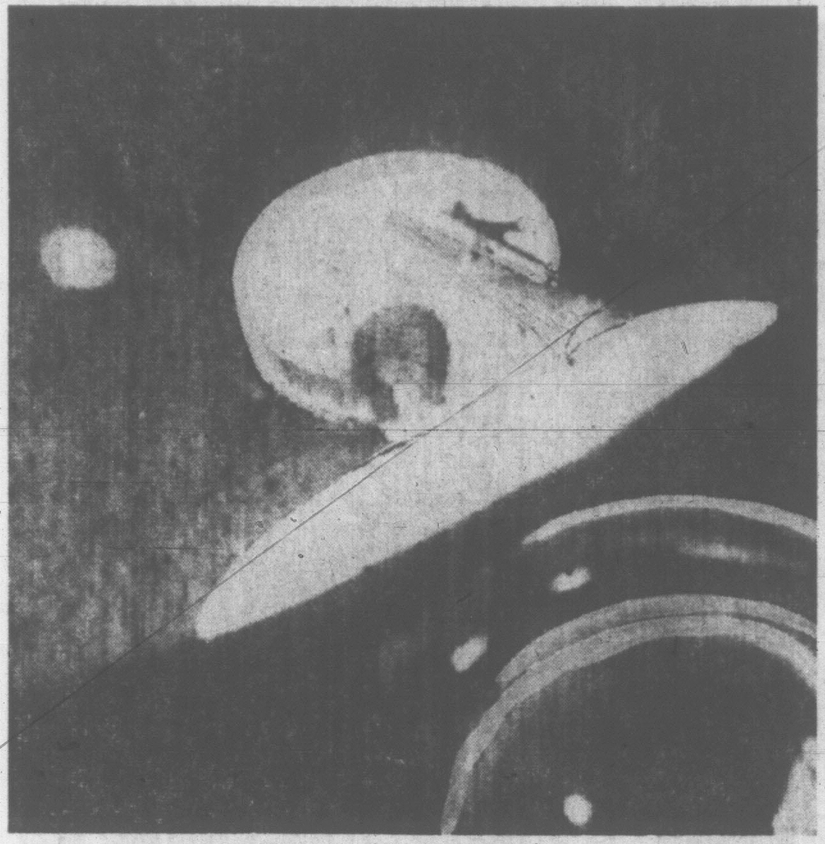
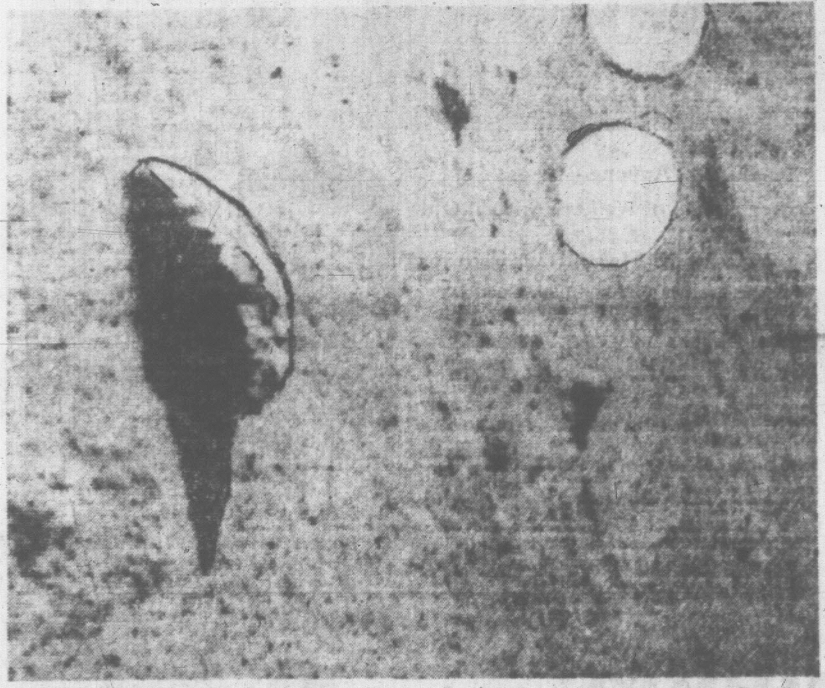
SOFT LANDING ON TARGET

SURFACE SHOWN TO BE FIRM

Surveyor Relays Moon Pebble Films



SURVEYOR'S "FOOT" causes a depression on the moon in this picture released today by Jet Propulsion Laboratory. The depression of the "foot" was made as the spacecraft landed late Wednesday night. Camera was six feet from the area photographed. Bright spots at left are sun reflections. Dark rings in lower right are reflections of TV tube as seen in the camera's mirror. (AP Wirephotos.)



MOON ROCK, six inches high and 12 inches long, is shown in this photograph transmitted from the moon by the spacecraft Surveyor. Smaller pebbles are several inches in diameter. Bright spots are reflections of sun.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Surveyor I, defying longshot odds against a first-try success, televised striking photos of the lunar landscape today after a seemingly perfect landing on the moon.

The pictures indicated to scientific viewers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory that the Sea of Storms target area has a relatively smooth, hard surface apparently suitable as a possible descent point for future astronauts.

The successful gentle touchdown, executed precisely as scheduled, was viewed as a long stride forward for the United States' Appolo lunar exploration program. Surveyor's rocket braking system is similar to that on the craft astronauts will use for a landing later in the decade.

A picture series beginning at 2:44 a.m., PDT, using a diffeernt TV screen system than that of two earlier batches, showed a broad plain devoid of major features, peppered with either pebbles or pits caused by meteorites. There were several small prominences, and some gouging, as if the surface had been struck by objects from space at an angle.

The pictures showed no damage to the spidery, instrument-jammed craft, 10 feet high and 14 feet in diameter. And they showed its feet resting atop the crust—important evidence in view of opinions of some scientists that the surface might be deep dust or spongy lava that could swallow a landing vehicle.

LAUNCHED MONDAY

The 620-pound Surveyor planted its three legs firmly on the lunar crust at 11:17:37 p.m., PTD, 63 hours and 250,000 miles after its launch Monday from Cape Kennedy.

Its crucial terminal sequence—a cartwheel in space to point its feet moonward, then at 60 miles out a blast from its powerful retro-rocket engine to slow to landing speed of 8 mph—ended with all instruments apparently functioning.

Thirty-five minutes later, it began televising pictures sent throughout North America and overseas by three U.S. networks, employing the Early Bird satellite.

The first batch of three showed a leg and other portions, with the lunar surface in the background.

There was nothing to hint of danger to future manned landing craft.

A second batch of 10 showed more distant terrain—flat and featureless, except for a shadow, apparently that of the spacecraft, in the shape of a three, and what appeared to be a large rock.

EARLY SHOTS FUZZY

The first two series, televised with 200 scan lines compared to 525 for a home TV screen, were dim and fuzzy and difficult to interpret.

Later shots with 600 scan lines—Surveyor is expected to return hundreds before the chill of the lunar nights ends its life 12 days hence—were far clearer.

A laboratory spokesman said after viewing the first 144 pictures — received at the Goldstone tracking station on the desert to the east and relayed here—that the landing was firm enough to cause one foot to make a slight contact depression.

A shadow around the edge of one of the two feet within range of the camera indicated the depression was quite shallow—perhaps two inches, the spokesman said.

Dr. Leonard Jaffe, project scientist, said of the pictures:

"They show a surface generally level, as expected, with objects that appear to be rocks and boulders, or fragments, from close to the spacecraft for as far as the eye can see, apparently to the horizon.

"Some appear to be a foot across.

Soviet Praise Tinged With Boast

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union praised the successful controlled landing of the U.S. Surveyor I on the moon today. In Britain, Prime Minister Harold Wilson sent congratulations to President Johnson "for this magnificent further achievement in the conquest of space."

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Soviet scientists think highly of the Surveyor feat calling it "an important part of the American moon program."

Tass pointed out, however, that the Soviet space ship Luna IX made the first soft landing on the moon Feb. 3 and asserted: "Foreign scientists admit that the flights of the Luna type helped the Americans overcome quickly the difficulties involved."

Tass said that with two soft landings having been accomplished, "traffic between the earth and the moon may be expected to become even livelier soon."

"This is natural, as manned flights to the moon will become possible only when the methods of soft landing in conditions where there is no atmosphere are mastered in full."

British television viewers saw a picture of the moon made by Surveyor that were flashed across the Atlantic by the Early Bird television satellite.

In Belgium, newspapers reported thousands were late for work because they stayed on to watch the moonshot pictures at home.

Japanese scientists hailed Surveyor's landing as "simply amazing" and "epoch-making."

Red's Luna X Loses Power

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Luna X unmanned spaceship, the moon's first man-made satellite, has run out of power and stopped sending information to earth, the news agency Tass reported today.

Luna X went into close orbit of the moon April 3, was in radio contact with Soviet stations until May 30 and made a total of 219 transmissions, the news agency added.

Tass also said that, as expected, the magnetic field around the moon is extremely weak. Micrometeorites are more numerous in space around the moon than in interplanetary space.

Viet Nam Asks UN To Observe Vote

Security Council To Get Request

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—South Viet Nam today formally requested UN observers for its elections of a constituent assembly in September.

The request was put verbally to Secretary General Thant by Ambassador Nguyen Duy Lien, South Vietnamese observer to the United Nations.

It was not immediately clear whether the Saigon government wanted the world organization merely to send observers or whether it envisaged a supervisory role for the U.N. in the elections.

OBSERVERS

A UN spokesman said Lien "informed the secretary general that the government of South Viet Nam intends to hold elections for a constituent assembly in September and requested the United Nations to send observers."

He said Sout Viet Nam would make its request in writing later.

Only last weekend, before the request was made, Thant said in Windsor, Ont., he could not see the use of UN supervision of Vietnamese elections "at this time."

SOVIET OPPOSITION

On his return from Europe on May 5, Thant also said he saw no possibility of a UN supervisory role in Vietnamese elections because it would run into Soviet opposition in the Security Council.

Although the procedure to be followed was unclear, presumably South Viet Nam would be advised by UN officials to send its request — in clearer terms — to the 15-member council.

Some diplomats saw significance in the request in that it was the first time Vietnamese authorities had asked the United Nations to take any part in its troubled internal affairs.

Thant's reaction to the request was not reported.

DE VALERA
. . . majority cut

Close Race In Irish Election

DUBLIN (UPI) — The Irish presidential election developed into a neck-and-neck struggle today as early returns showed a swing away from President Eamon de Valera's traditional strongholds.

Opposition candidate Tom O'Higgins was biting into De Valera's massive 1959 majority of 120,000 in the 38 constituencies and was reported well ahead in the capital.

At 9 a.m. PDT De Valera had 88,776 votes against O'Higgins' 69,269 on the basis of the first four areas to complete counts.

O'Higgins, 49, representing the Fine Gael Party, was polling heavily in the urban areas and had reduced De Valera's 1959 majority in the four rural areas reporting.

Observers believed O'Higgins needed to take substantial majorities in the cities to overcome the traditional strength of De Valera among the agricultural community.

Pact Ministers In Secret Talks

LONDON (AP)—Defence ministers of six nations of the Warsaw Pact are meeting secretly in Moscow to prepare for a reorganization of their alliance, qualified diplomats reported tonight.

Information from the Sovie capital indicated the ministers are laying the groundwork for a summit conference of leaders from the Soviet Union, Romania, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and East Germany.

RETIREMENT from public office was announced today by Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania. "I'm not going to run ever again for any public office under any circumstances," he said. Scranton, who lost the Republican presidential nomination to Barry Goldwater in 1964, completes his term as governor next year.

Balaguer Tops Vote In Dominican

SANTO DOMINGO (AP)—Conservative Joaquin Balaguer appeared today to have clinched a stunning victory over moderate leftist Juan Bosch in the Dominican Republic presidential elections.

With about half the vote counted, Balaguer, candidate of the Reformist Party, had 319,474 votes to 225,776 for Bosch, leader of the Dominican Revolutionary Party.

Balaguer and his supporters issued triumphant victory claims amid wild celebrations.

In the downtown sector, the heart of the constitutionalist district in the April, 1965, revolution, small knots of hostile looking young partisans of the Bosch party gathered at street corners. Police were patrolling the area.

A heavy vote piled up in the conservative-minded rural areas for Balaguer, who served as vice-president under dictator Rafael Leonidas Trujillo and as president after Trujillo's assassination.

U.S. HOPES TO PROVE GEMINI 9 NOT JINXED

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—U.S. space officials, buoyed by the successful moon landing of Surveyor, said today that all signs are hopeful for a successful launch at 9:39 a.m. EDT Friday of the hard-luck Gemini 9 spacecraft.

Astronauts Tom Stafford and Eugene Cernan spent part of Thursday at an old familiar pastime—practice.

Engineers were confident they have eliminated the computer system bug that balked Wednesday's Gemini 9 launch only one minute, 40 seconds before blastoff. They replaced two electronic parts, called logic modules, in the system that relays guidance commands from a ground computer to the spacecraft.

"Go" signals streamed in from around the world for the ambitious rendezvous and spacewalk flight.

Emergency Talks Out

Pickers Strike

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (UPI)—Striking Mexicans and Mexican-American melon pickers today extended picket lines to a fourth big farm and stationed pickets at bridges and a ferry crossing in an effort to make farmers raise the hourly wage to the national minimum of $1.25. The going wage for pickers is 50 cents an hour.

PART OF WORLD-WIDE EXPANSION

Japan Firm to Develop Oil Holdings in Alberta

TOKYO (Reuters) — The Japan Petroleum Exploration Co. has reached an agreement to develop petroleum resouces in Aberta wth local interests, a spokesman sad today.

The agreement, subject to approval by the Japanese government and the province of Alberta, will be intialled in Canada soon by Kiyoshi Yoshida, executive director of the Japanese firm, and representatives of a Canadian company, whose name could not be disclosed at this stage, the spokesman said.

Yoshida was scheduled to leave for Canada Friday.

The agreement concerns the acquisition of 50.1 per cent of the Canadian firm's stocks by the Japanese company and a joint project for the developmen of petroleum resources by the two organizations, the spokesman said.

Under the present plan, the Canadian firm, which already owns 617 square miles of mine lots in Alberta, would acquire another 308 square miles of mine lots in Alberta and two other western provinces, the spokesman said.

Oil fields would be developed at five sites in the 925 square miles of mine lots, to mine 2,859,700,000 gallons of oil at each site over a period of 20 years, he said.

The development project

80,000 Silently Watch Hangings

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—More than 80,000 silent spectators watched as four former prominent cabinet ministers were hanged in one of Leopoldville's main squares today for plotting to overthrow the government.

Former prime minister Evariste Kimba, 40, was the first to go to the gallows. He held himself erect, with a black towel over his face and his hands tied behind his back.

The others — Alexandre Mahamba, 45, a former minister of lands; Senator Emmanuel Bamba, 46, a former finance minister; and Jerome Anany, a former defence minister—were executed at 20-minute intervals.

The four condemned men all walked serenely to their deaths, clad in identical blue shorts. They said nothing and were believed to be gagged under their black hoods.

There were two hangmen, clad in black robes over what appeared to be military uniforms. Four buglers faced each man and played the Last Post before the trap was opened.

The sombre crowd at the hangings contrasted sharply with the shouting, fighting gathering at the four men's hearing Tuesday, when any point the prisoners tried to make was hissed and booed.

The crowd included women and children, but many began leaving immediately after the first execution.

A number of high - ranking military officers, including Col. Pierre Ingila, chief justice at the tribunal which sentenced the men, were in attendance.

But three special chairs were vacant. They were understood to have been left for the three men the condemned politicians were accused of plotting to kill—President Joseph Mobutu, Prime Minister Leonard Mulama and the army chief of staff, Gen. Louis Bobozo.

Mobutu did not respond to last-minute appeals for clemency by religious and diplomatic leaders.

Most major Western embassies were closed and their staffs and nationals were instructed to stay indoors during the executions.

New Findings Open Door To Possible Cancer Cause

CHICAGO, (AP) — Two new findings that open a new approach to the elusive goal of finding the cause of cancer and the means of preventing it were disclosed today by a medical research team from Columbia University.

The researchers presented the strongest tentative evidence yet that cancers may be started by viruses which then move on to repeat their destructive work in adjoining cells.

Dr. John K. Lattimer, chairman of the department of urology at Columbia University in New York, said virus-like particles have been found for the first time in healthy looking cells lying adjacent to cancer cells in prostate glands. They were not found in the cancer cells.

He said his researchers also discovered that these cells, which appeared normal under ordinary-light microscopes, were shown by electron microscopes to be actually growing at the "same tremendous rate" as cancer cells.

"The discovery of either condition was unusual, but when they appear in combination it becomes exciting," he said in an interview at the annual meeting of the American Urological Association.

Dr. Myron Tannenbaum, pathologist member of the research team, exhibited picture slides at the urologists' convention.

Lattimer credited Tannenbaum with making the discoveries.

DEFINES NEXT STEP

Lattimer said the next step is to attempt to isolate the virus-like particles, grow them in a tissue culture and infect healthy tissue cultures with them.

If the virus proved to cause cancer, the final step would be an attempt to produce an anti-cancer vaccine, patterned after the polio vaccines and using dead or attenuated cancer viruses.

He said the work would require "six or seven years" before the final answer is found.

Lattimer said the virus theory does not conflict with current knowledge that cancers can be caused by chemical agents or other irritants. He said irritation or a change in hormone balance could alter a cell's resistance sufficiently to permit a virusto talkover.

Other investigators have theorized that some cancers, including leukemia, are caused by viruses, but laboratory confirmation has been spotty. Lattimer suggested that may be because the studies centred on the actual cancer tumors rather than adjacent tissue.

CPR HOTEL PURCHASE ABANDONED

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Winnipeg real estate firm of Allan T. Bass Ltd. "did not complete" its planned purchase of Canadian Pacific's Royal Alexandra Hotel here, the CPR announced today.

A CPR statement gave no reason for the deal's abandonment. Mr. Bass said he would have no comment at this time.

Mortgage Group Adds Waterfront Area Holdings

Improvement of its investment security position by adding to waterfront property holdings is reported in the quarterly statement of Victoria Mortgage Corp. Ltd.

President Douglas Hawkes said more than 30 per cent of the firm's investment is secured by properties containing waterfront "an unsurpassable security".

The average investment against security, now 35.38 per cent, has been below 40 per cent for more than two years, Mr. Hawkes said.

Net company security amounts to $1,936,700, exclusive of bonds, of which there is $50,000 worth of B.C.-guaranteed PGE bonds.

Net mortgage investments up to May 24 totalled $685,218, the report said.

Extra preferred share dividend this quarter remains at the 3½ cent level started in December 1964, while the 1½ cent common share dividend is down a half cent from the February 1966 pay-out.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Mines Display Strength

The mining section showed strength in trading before noon on the Vancouver stock exchange.

However, volume was light with only 517,017 shares traded to 11 a.m.

Blue Star was the big trader, taking a three-cent climb to 35. Brenda was up 15 cents to $6.55 and Pyramid added 62 cents to $13.12.

Among other gainers were Adera, up seven cents to 43, Cowichan, up four to 84, Hogan, up five to 95, and Kamloops, up three to 35.

In the senior mines, Pine Point added $1.75 to $63.50.

Futurity continued to trade heavily in the oils, adding a cent to 91. Peace River and Share took slight losses.

B.C. Tel, in the industrials dropped 87 cents to $61.62, and Scott was off 25 to $18.75.

* * *

Prices were mixed at both Toronto and New York in dull trading.

AT TORONTO in the main list, Great Lakes Power and B-A Oil gained ½ each to 27½ and 33, and Alcan Aluminium ¼ to 40¼. Bank of Montreal was down ⅞ to 59¾ and Massey-Ferguson ¼ to 35½.

Base metals showed good strength with Pine Point up 1⅞ to 64⅞, Cominco ⅝ to 40⅞ and Denison ⅜ to 48¾.

Banff advanced ⅜ to 15½ in western oils and Canadian Industrial Gas and Oil ¼ to 13¾. Union and Canadian Superior lost ¼ each to 28⅝. Union and Canadian Superior lost ¼ each to 28⅝ and 18¾.

Anglo American Molybdenite climbed 12 to 72 cents in speculative mines.

AT NEW YORK the list was a hodge-podge of gains and losses as traders seized the occasion of the early rally to sell and take profits on short-term gains.

The early rise was featured by aerospace, airlines, electronics and other high flyers. Gains of one or two points in some instances were shaved to fractions, in others they were erased entirely and losses took their place.

IBM took a loss of five points.

Fractional gains were held by Pan-American, American and United Airlines, while Eastern slumped about 2½.

AT MONTREAL utilities and banks were off, but most other sections moved fractionally higher in heavy trading.

Papers were higher, with Consolidated climbing ¼ 38½ and Abitibi ⅛ to 11⅛.

AT LONDON the market declined further today. Selling was not large but enough to show losses of up to one shilling in many industrials.

Gilts fell away by ¼ or 5/16. Dollar stocks were inclined easier. Most Canadians were dull but Hollinger and Trans-Canada Pipe hardened a shade.

Toronto was firmer but other Canadian banks eased a little. Home banks were little changed but insurance saw some sharp falls.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP)—Most prices showed underlying firmness in dull trade on the Winnipeg grain exchange today.

There were no reports of export disposable as strikes contined to plague St. Lawrence River and British ports.

Flax disclosed light hedges in routine buying. Higher linseed oil prices on the continent were also a factor.

Rapeseed recorded modest advances in giving notice of an upward swing in Chicago soybean prices.

Oats and barley trade was on a domestic basis.

Big Portage Dam At 250-Ft. Level

VANCOUVER (CP) — A labor force of more than 3,500 men and millions of dollars worth of machines have already raised the Portage Mountain dam more than 250 feet, with more than 27,000,000 cubic yards of fill, B.C. Hydro and Power Authority said today.

By the end of the 1967 construction season the big dam near Hudson Hope on the Peace River will have reached its ultimate height of 600 feet and extend 6,700 feet across the Peace River valley.

The men and machines are working on a round-the-clock basis, seven days a week. Hydro said that on May 27 they achieved what is believed a world record for fill placement — 150,000 cubic yards in a 24-hour period or 130 tons a minute throughout the day and night.

Hydro's goal is for production of the first power from the giant dam by October, 1968, with ultimate devlopment of 2,300,000 kilowatts for power-hungry B.C. in the 1970's. Hydro is constructing a 575-mile-long, 500,000-volt transmission line from the dam down through the centre of the province to carry the power to the populous lower mainland area.

Extend Deadline On Unlisted Board

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver Stock Exchange has decided to permit the unlisted stock board to operate on its floor after June 6.

The action was taken by governors. In a brief release after a meeting, the governors said: "Action regarding trading in unlisted securities has been deferred pending further notice."

Early in March, the exchange gave 90 days notice that the board would be removed and members would not be allowed to trade unlisted securities on the floor. The deadline would have been June 6.

Industrial Production Shows Gain

LONDON (UPI) — Rapid growth of industrial production in North America and a sharp upturn in Japan increased world industrial output in the first quarter of 1966 although growth was slower in Europe than the rate achieved in the latter half of 1965.

Excessive wage rises and price increases in many countries were causing "widespread concern."

The independent National Institute of Economic and Social Research said this in its quarterly review and forecast another increase in world output this year.

It said that the difference between recent developments in North America and Europe primarily reflected differences in the behavior of private investment. Such investment was booming in the U.S. and in Canada while in Britain and Western Germany it was slowing down. In France and Italy it was hesitant.

The institute noted that "the usual measures" had been taken to restrain climbing wages and prices like credit curbs, price controls, tax increases and official guidelines.

In Europe, these measures have been more effective in checking the rise in prices than that of wages with unfortunate results. The squeeze on profits was discouraging investment.

In North America price increases were still "relatively moderate" but had accelerated recently but profits as well as investment were still booming.

Car Output Second High

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. auto output last month was the second highest in history for May, despite a variety of handicaps, including production cutbacks, supplier shortages and labor disputes.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors listed May's car production at a total of 794,524 units in preliminary reports Wednesday. This was well below the record of 837,166 set in May, 1965.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1966—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

Last week in this corner, we discussed the problem facing the student teacher who has completed his first two years of training and must now decide whether to plug on along the rocky academic road, or help ease the B.C. teacher shortage as a temporary schoolmaster or marm.

Obviously, this question called for a Solomon's judgment, so I passed it on to those best able to deal with it.

The result has been a batch of phone calls and letters from experienced teachers, and a remarkably even division of opinion.

Some, but not all of the older teachers who remember their grim depression-day struggles for an education are strong for staying on.

"If funds are available," urges E. V. H. "go back and get your degree with my blessing.

"Basic education for teachers is ever escalating and very soon a degree will be a must. Financial gain, not to mention academic superiority, will quickly make up for two short years in university.

"In this time, you will mature in thought and tastes and choices. You will gain confidence and be more skilled in handling youngsters."

★

That's one viewpoint offered by a teacher who began her training in Normal School and rounded it out later with summer courses at UBC.

Now for another, presented in a brisk letter by W. C. Barrell of Esquimalt Junior Secondary:

"Since British Columbia has no teacher intern program (and it should have) my advice to the student is: 'by all means take your temporary certificate and get out and teach.'

"Good teachers are made, not born, and they are made in the classroom, not in the university."

Mr. Barrell goes on to assure the rookie that he won't lack for help from his seniors in the profession.

"He will have experienced teachers near who will be ready with help when asked and a sympathetic principal to keep a close eye on his progress. He will make mistakes and he will have to find the answers but in doing so he will learn what no college, however good it may be, can teach him about classroom situations."

Further, Mr. Barrell suggests, the young temporary certificate holder who takes the plunge now rather than later will learn whether he truly wants to teach.

★

Next note to hand urges at least a third year of university training, pointing out that "it's hard to get back into the study groove once out of it," and that "after a year of teaching, especially the first, should come a real vacation."

Sounds sensible; but in comes a young man who has taken the other approach. He gained his permanent certificate at summer school and emphasizes the travails of the beginner who invades the classroom with "an overload of theory and very little practice."

These opinions I've quoted, and others for which I'm no less grateful, seem to indicate that it's dealer's choice and that it will remain so until our teacher training procedures undergo certain radical changes.

Some of these are already in the works. I'm told that Uvic education faculty is planning long-range revisions, one of which will be drastically increased emphasis on practice teaching. Next fall, third-year students will leaven their courses with classroom observation tours and substitute teaching assignments.

But the eventual answer may come through a teacher intern program as proposed by Mr. Barrell and to be introduced on a limited scale by rural Saanich and Sooke. There, picked non-education faculty graduates who wish to teach will be allowed to glean credits on the classroom firing line.

It seems to me that an expanded version of this earn-as-you learn system might solve the teacher trainee's dilemma.

Longshoremen Quit Work As Ship Leans With Load

Longshoremen at Ogden Point walked off a British freighter this morning after she listed dangerously, spilling part of her cargo onto the dock and into the water.

At press time the ship's crew was working frantically to right the ship.

The 13,000-ton Huntsland began to list Tuesday as the last of her super-cargo was loaded above deck.

By this morning she was tilting at a five degree angle and still listing.

Longshoremen's business agent, Stan Ball, took one look at the situation and called the 65 longshoremen working her onto the dock.

He then informed ship's captain, F. Richardson, that his men would not resume work until the ship was straightened.

At one point, the ship's booms, which angle out over the side, were less than a foot from the roof of a dockside warehouse.

At the same time, an aft rail gave way, toppling hundreds of two-by-fours into the water and on to the dockside.

SEVERAL HOURS

The Huntsland was to have sailed this afternoon with some 6-million board feet of lumber for United Kingdom ports.

But it was expected to take several hours before water could be pumped into starboard tanks to right her.

A ship's spokesman said the damaged rail would probably have to be repaired before she finally sails. Only a month ago, a similar incident at Port Alberni cost one longshoreman his life, when the freighter Archangel spewed most of her super-cargo into the water.

Said Mr. Ball; "We decided then that it was too dangerous to load ships when they are listing at more than three degrees.

"Only yesterday at a meeting in Vancouver we discussed what to do when this sort of situation arises."

Free Legal Assistance Given 313

Victoria lawyers provided free legal assistance to 313 applicants last year.

A report to the annual meeting of the Victoria Bar Association Wednesday said that the applicants were involved in 56 criminal proceedings and 257 civil litigations.

Legal aid chairman M. D. W. Young told the Times today that in 127 cases summary advice was given to applicants. In 68 civil cases and 36 criminal cases lawyers were assigned to represent the applicants.

He said legal aid is offered where the applicant is destitute. Persons involved in criminal matters are referred to the bar association by various welfare agencies.

Persons involved in civil matters may apply by attending Victoria Law Courts at 5 p.m. any Wednesday. A panel of lawyers meets there at that time to screen applicants.

There has been an average of two referrals a week to local lawyers.

In criminal cases the attorney-general's department accepts part of the cost of the service.

The bar association re-elected Alan Macfarlane, Oak Bay MLA, to a second term as president.

Gary Kenneth Davis of 450 Simcoe is being treated for extensive chest injuries in the hospital's intensive care unit.

The driver was alone when his car collided with a boulevard tree.

High Costs May Force Single Medicare Plan

By JOHN MIKA

The province's 11 private medicare plans today may be looking at the first glint of a scissors which eventually will cut them off and send all subscribers into the B.C. Medical Plan operated by the government.

The two blades that possibly could cut deep into their present business:

Rising costs and Premier Bennett's determination to keep BCMP rates at present levels by increasing subsidies if necessary.

Officials in both the B.C. Medical Society and one of the leading private plans interviewed today both said at the moment the government premiums for individuals pose no threat because the group-plan rates, usually sponsored by empolyers, still are lower.

But they conceded that if costs continue rising for the private plans and the government uses subsidies to keep its premiums down, the day may come when it will be cheaper for every employee to join BCMP as an individual rather than stay in his company plan.

IN BACK DOOR

If that day comes, British Columbia will have a single government medicare plan in operation on a voluntary basis and with the help of the doctors even though they want to see a multiplicity of plans remain.

It could be viewed as government medicare introduced quietly through the back door.

The indications this may be coming lie in the impending increase of up to 10 per cent in doctors' fees Jan. 1 to be followed within two years by what now looks like a similar boost. Other costs for the private plans also are likely.

These inevitably will force ever-rising premiums to meet the expenses.

FEE INCREASES

But Premier Bennett Wednesday confirmed that the $14 million in this year's budget for BCMP includes an amount to take care of the fee increase and he will pour more subsidies if necessary in future to keep the rates at their present level.

In fact, while describing the BCMP as the "best plan in Canada," he said he will seek federal contribution to the provincial plan under the proposed national health plan to be started next summer — and this would give him more funds for cushioning the effects of rising costs on his premium level.

Ironically, it was the agreement last June by B.C. Medical Society with BCMP for a precedent-making contract which ties the doctors' payments from the plan to a composite wage-living cost index for the first time that will bring the automatic raises in fees next January and in January, 1969.

Dr. E. C. McCoy, executive director of the medical society told The Times this morning that he doubts the doctors have agreed to a device that is bound to put BCMP into a competitive advantage with private insurance plans.

"But I haven't the slightest idea what the long-range picture will be," he added.

GROUP RATE

"The group rate premiums now charged by MSA and the others are still far below the government's individual-rate premiums.

"But if the government keeps picking up the increases that will come over the long range by subsidizing its premiums, then they could become cheaper even than group rates.

"But I don't think this is what the premier means. As I understood the reports, he just plans to increase subsidies to cover the Jan. 1 increase," said Dr. McCoy.

BETTER SERVED

Dr. McCoy emphasized that doctors felt the province would be better served if there were a variety of medicare plans available, and he said they certainly hoped no government would undercut the other premiums so it dominated the field.

"The government plan fills the gaps for the sick, the poor and the old (who often are barred from private plans) and that's what it should continue," he said.

However, Premier Bennett said the government rates will continue to be subsidized "as much as necessary" to keep the premiums within reach of all persons who need covrage on an individual basis. In addition, special subsidies will be available for persons with less than $1,000 taxable income.

He said the government knew its agreement with the society meant there would be a fee increase next year and in 1969 and

BUT NO ROOM AT THE INN FOR WOLFGANG

Jaycees Open Biggest Convention

By GLEN ALLEN

Dedication is a man named Wolfgang Sholz.

One of 600 expected a at the B.C. Yukon Junior Chamber of Commerce convention opening in Victoria today for four days, Mr. Sholz and his companion Boots, are in for a spartan sojourn.

A Jayceee president for Coast Skeena district, Mr. Sholz and his dog drove to Victoria from Kitimat in 36 hours and plan to bunk together in the family van during the conference.

Mr. Sholz explains that travelling expenses were formidable enough without putting out for beds at a local hostelry.

Besides, although Boots is the perfect gentleman, it's not every inn that will find room for him.

Coast Skeena district is one of 45 represented at the biggest provincial Jaycee convention ever to be held.

Today's convention opening events began at the Red Lion Inn with the provincial Jaycee oratorical finals at 10:30 a.m., followed by several hours of Jaycee business and at 3 p.m. a parade through the city.

The parade, made up of among other things the Esquimalt trolley, a giant cowboy hat manned by the New Westminster contingent, Victoria area school marching bands, Miss Victoria, and 14 floats, began at the CPR wharf, followed Belleville to Douglas, went along Douglas to Caledonia and ended at the arena.

Friday's activities will be devoted to more Jaycee business, a stag luncheon and a dance at Crystal Garden.

Saturday Jaycees and their wives, after awards luncheon at the Racquet Club will meet at Government House where Lieut.-Gov. George Pearkes will host a cocktail party for the proviince's young businessmen and tradesmen organization.

At 9 p.m. the president's ball will be held at the Racquet Club.

Major business at hand will include debate on new resolutions and elections.

Victoria Jaycee president Brian Small is a candidate for provincial vice-presdent.

The convention will end after a final business meeting Sunday morning, again at the Red Lion Inn.

Convention chairman and incoming Victoria Jaycee president Grant Johnstone said 100 Jaycees from Washington, Oregon and Idaho are among those here for the convention.

●

About 700 Jaycees opened a three-day convention in Victoria today but some of the delegates began painting the town Wednesday.

Three of the delegates were spotted spraying an election campaign plug over a sign beside the Pat Bay Highway and the West Saanich Road.

Police tracked down the culprits at the Red Lion Inn, the convention site.

Conrad Nostwald of Prince George was given one hour to remove the green paint from the sign.

TAKING BREAKFAST with Boots, the unofficial but hard-travelling Jaycee mascot, is owner and Kitimat Jaycee Wolfgang Sholz. Pair will share camper van for four-day provincial Junior Chamber of Commerce convention which began at Red Lion Inn this morning. Among 600 expected are Jaycees from B.C., Yukon, Washington, Idaho and Oregon.

BLACKOUT CAUSED BY KITE

B.C. Hydro issued an old warning with new emphasis today:

Don't fly kites on city streets.

Sudden death in the form of high-tension wires, bearing no insulation, is threaded through almost every street in the residential areas.

Wednesday evening Gino Bressau of 316 Moss flew a kite for his daughter Bonnie. It had a wooden frame and was covered with metal foil.

It crossed two wires in a 12,000-volt power line. The short circuit broke the line. It hit the lawn and driveway like a hissing snake.

BLACKOUT

The heat cracked the pavement, set some bushes afire and blacked out a large section of Fairfield.

The break in the line threw an overflow of juice into a transformer. It exploded and more wires came down. It was 2 hours before service was restored.

Hydro officials today said normally a broken wire would cause switches to trip, killing the line. But this one remained energized for nine minutes.

A tragedy could have resulted had anyone been under the falling wire — or if Mr. Bressau's kite had been held by wire.

The only part of town where this hazard does not exist at all times is in the 30-block downtown area where all wires are underground.

B.C. Hydro issues an annual warning about kites through the press. No campaign has been launched in the schools. Officials said they believe the schools teach about this danger themselves.

FEW OUTAGES

"There aren't many outages from kites. But we take a lot of kites off lines," says an official.

Mr. Bressau is worried that he might get a bill for the damage. The Hydro is considering such action.

"He is very fortunate," said the official, whether or not he gets the bill. He's still alive.

Vancouver Man Takes Jaycee Talk Concert

Winner of the B.C.-Yukon Junior Chamber of Commerce oratorical finals this morning at the Red Lion Inn was Don Gordon, a 34-year-old sales representative and member of Vancouver Jaycees.

Other finalists were Dave Else, 25, of Duncan, who was in a serious automobile accident one hour before the speak-off, held at 10:30 a.m., and Jim Kelly, 26, of Kelowna Jaycees.

All spoke on the problems of the Canadian Indian.

The award has been made annually for 35 years by the Native Sons of British Columbia, Victoria post.

Motorcycle Daredevil In Plunge

The daredevil motorcycle aerialist who thrilled crowds at the Jaycee Fair here two weeks ago was injured Wednesday when he fell while performing his act in Port Alberni.

Rudi Berg, a veteran high-wire man, is reported in "good" condition in West Coast Regional Hospital today with minor injuries as a result of his 30-foot fall.

RCMP say he was revving his 300cc motorcycle to the top of a 100-foot high wire when the tracked front wheel slipped off

The bike jammed on the wire and he plunged to the ground.

His partner, Julianne Neff, managed to remain clinging to the trapeze which is suspended below the bike.

LEFT HANGING

Earlier in the week the same thing happened when the pair had reached a point just short of the 100-foot tower.

Rudi and his partner were left hanging for about one hour before Port Alberni Fire Department rescued them with an aerial ladder truck.

When he was in Victoria he said in an interview he accepted danger as part of the job but he would only be doing it for another five years and then would retire.

Man Jailed Six Months For Thefts

A man who was spotted stealing a radio, camera and a pair of gloves from a tourist's car Wednesday was sentenced to six months in jail today.

Lyle Henry of no fixed address pleaded guilty in central magistrate's court.

Police said the accused turned over the stolen articles to a man on Douglas Street who asked him what he was doing in the unlocked car with the Ontario licence plates.

Henry was then followed to a beer parlor where the witness had a chance to phone police.

The accused had a record of six previous theft convictions.

"It doesn't appear you ever intend to learn from past experience," Magistrate William Ostler told him.

Ask The Times

Q. Is there an association for owners of antique cars in Victoria? C.P.

A. Yes, Victoria has a Vintage Car Club, mailing address 1252 Wharf St., which meets the second Monday of every month at Morrison Motors, 3050 Douglas.

Q. Which body of water is properly called James Bay and which the Inner Harbor?

A. There has long been dispute about this point. On early maps James Bay is shown as that body of water which the Empress Hotel is built, and the Inner Harbor as that stretch beyond the Johnson Street bridge. But authorities on Victoria nomenclature agree that both names now are taken to mean the same thing, that is, the entire harbor area.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

VANCOUVER MOTORISTS GET A HOLIDAY

City Won't Stop Giving Parking Tickets

Owners of illegally parked cars in Vancouver are safe, temporarily at least, from prosecution.

But in Victoria they are still getting tickets.

The stop order to policemen regarding parking regulation went out Wednesday.

It followed discovery of an apparent loophole in the Motor Vehicle Act by Magistrate Les Bewley.

He said that a deletion was made in the act at the last session of the B.C. legislature. His interpretation of the deletion is that unless police catch the driver in an illegally parked car, no ticket can be issued.

This is because police cannot positively identify the driver. The car can be towed away, however, if it is an obstruction.

The deleted section of the act placed the onus on the car owner to prove he was not the driver when the car was parked. Since the deletion, the Crown must identify the driver to make the ticket stick, the magistrate believes.

In Victoria, however, city solicitor Terry O'Grady points out that Section 67 of the act is still in force.

It says that a car owner "... shall be held responsible for any violation ... by any person entrusted by the owner with the possession of that motor vehicle."

"I can only suggest that prosecutors will rely upon Section 67 which makes the owner responsible for violations," said Mr. O'Grady.

Attorney-General Bonner said in Vancouver that he approved the action of Vancouver in taking the question to a higher court. He did not order a halt to issuance of parking tickets elsewhere in the province, however.

He pointed out that the suspension of tickets for parking in Vancouver was a decision taken at the local level.

The appeal is not expected to be heard until the end of June.

But Mr. Bonner said there would be some clarification "within several days."

Many drivers today in Vancouver were ignoring parking regulations secure in the belief they were free from the usual $3 fine. But they are finding out their cars are being towed away—at a cost to them of $5.

The stop-ticketing order is expected to cost the city about $5,000 a week and to lower revenues from parking meters, which normally yield $8,000 a week.

Cool Weather Boon To Sweet Pea Plants

By HILDA BEASTALL

Sweet peas are one of the annuals enjoying the coolish weather.

Supplied with a damp soil and a little shade over the root area, the vines are making strong growth, promising plenty of blooms by the middle of June.

Hilda

One of the English raisers of sweet pea seed, Charles Unwin, wrote in one of his books that the removal of vine tendrils leads to a decrease in quality of perfume in the blooms. This would explain in some measure why we think sweet peas in large shows are often lacking in this desirable gift, even though the size of bloom and clarity of color are superb.

Exhibitors may gain length of stem and flower size by removing tendrils as they appear but for garden decorations and fragrant bouquets in the home we may safely leave them alone.

For a couple of weeks as the vines are making their growth up to three or four feet, the first few flower stems can be nipped off as they appear.

It will be noticed that only two or three buds, sometimes even one, comes to a stem during this growing period so that little is lost and much will gained in increased vigor.

After two weeks the removal of buds is no longer an advantage and the viens will respond with many fine stems of blooms.

Another belief of Mr. Unwin, made from a lifetime of observation, is that the sweet pea flowers containing the basic blue or purple of the original highly fragrant peas from which today's were bred still contain the most fragrance.

We can all test this for ourselves this year, among the lavender, blue, purple and mauve colors we may grow. The white Gigantic is also conceded as being well perfumed.

Austria Lifts Bar On Former Archduke

VIENNA (AP) — Otto von Habsburg, son of the last Austrian emperor and former pretender to the throne, was issued a regular Austrian passport today allowing him to return to his native country for the first time since 1919.

Otto's Vienna lawyer, Dr. Ludwig Draxler, said the former archduke had "no plans for an immediate return" and would maintain his regular residence at Poecking, in the West German state of Bavaria.

The passport was issued by the ministry of interior following the decision of chancellor Josef Klaus' new Conservative government to settle the "Habsburg case."

The Socialist party, a member of all post-war governments until the present one, had blocked all previous moves to allow Otto to return.

Otto, now 53, had been barred from Austria since his father Emperor Karl I, was expelled after the 1918 collapse of the Austrian-Hungarian empire and the end of 640 years of Habsburg rule. Karl died in 1922 in exile on the Island of Madeira. Otto, a political scientist, historian and champion of European unity, renounced his claims to the throne and pleaded loyalty to the Austrian republic in 1961 in an effort to obtain government permission to live in Austria as do other members of the Habsburg family.

Russia Blasts 'Anti-Soviet Smear Campaign' in Canada

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia has protested to Canada against an alleged "anti - Soviet campaign" and claimed that it was being aggravated by the Ottawa government.

The protest was made in a statement handed Wednesday to H. F. Clark, counsellor of the Canadian embassy here, by a Soviet foreign ministry official.

It also accused unspecified Canadians of "provocative activities" against the Soviet embassy in Ottawa and called on the Canadian government to "put an end" to these activities.

Every time Soviet - Canadian relations showed signs of improvement, the statement said, "certain forces both inside and outside Canada . . . strive to harm these relations and darken the prospectives for their future development."

The statement alleged that the Canadian government not only did nothing to stop "periodic anti - Soviet campaigns" but "helped to blow them up by false reports about so-called Soviet spying."

The statement linked the "anti-Soviet campaign" with investigations into the activities of the late George Spencer, a Canadian post office employee alleged to have spied for the Russians.

"A particularly hostile campaign" had been whipped up around the Spencer case, it alleged.

Although a summary of the statement published in the Communist party newspaper Pravda did not mention the Gerda Munsinger case, other Soviet press comments recently have claimed that this is also part of a campaign to blacken the Soviet Union.

Canadian sources today expressed their surprise and disappointment at the Soviet statement, which, they added, was only likely to add to suspicion inside Canada of Soviet activities.

Some observers here said the protest might put in doubt the scheduled visit to Canada of Dmitry Polyansky, first deputy prime minister, who is due there at the head of a parliamentary delegation June 27.

BARNEY OLSON
. . . varied career

HOTEL OWNER

Transportation, Arena Were His Major Projects

A man who came to Victoria in 1912 with $4 in his pocket and became a successful businessman died in St. Joseph's Hospital Wednesday.

Harold (Barney) Olson, aged 70, had a long career in transportation and was owner of the Strathcona Hotel. At various times he was interested in an airway, a miniature golf course, an ice arena and roller rink.

Born at Milltown, Wis., Mr. Olson was raised on a farm operated by his Danish father. He tackled every job on the farm and also ran a trapline.

Leaving school at 15, he drove teams of horses in lumber camps in winter and worked on the railway in summer. As a farm laborer, he put himself through an automobile training school at Minneapolis.

Later he came to B.C. to join his brother, Henry, and became chauffeur to the late Charles Spratt, owner of Victoria Machinery Depot.

He acquired his nickname from the racing driver Barney Oldfield.

In 1918, Mr. Olson bought an interest in a taxi and sightseeing company and a year later bought out his partners.

INTEREST IN AIRLINE

Then he began a career in transportation which took him to Seattle, Spokane and finally, in 1935, to Winnipeg. During this time he was part owner of Circle Tours, Inland Transportation Co., Seattle Grey Line, Greyhound Line and others. He was also interested in the former Alaska-Washington Airways.

Returning to Victoria in 1940, he became arena commissioner and acquired an interest in the Malaspina Hotel at Nanaimo. During the war years he operated an ice arena at the old Willows exhibition ground until it burned down.

Mr. Olson is survived by the widow, Mary, at their home at 1476 Beach Drive; two sons, Keith and John of Victoria; eight grandchildren; two brothers, R. S. (Speed) Olson of Victoria and C. H. Olson, Vancouver, Wash.

Rev. Robin Salter will conduct a funeral service in McCall's Chapel Saturday at 3 p.m.

Birth Control Propaganda To Be Allowed

ROME (AP)—The Italian cabinet was reported today to have prepared a law repealing the 35-year-old ban on birth control propaganda.

The change was said to be included in a wide-ranging reform of Italy's public security laws which the cabinet approved Wednesday. The reform plan must be approved by both houses of Parliament to be effective.

Newspaper reports said a section of the reform law would lift the ban on advertising and advocacy of birth control methods so long as they did not offend good taste or were not done solely for profit.

The present law, dating from the fascist era, does not prohibit the sale of contraceptives but bans public statements advocating them. Contraceptives can be advertised by brand name but not by function.

Davey Picked, Paper Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — The Citizen says the Canadian Football League Friday will issue a statement naming Senator Keith Davey unanimous choice to succeed Syd Halter as league commissioner.

In a front-page story the newspaper says Senator Davey, 40, will be given a two-year contract with a salary "in the neighborhood of $25,000 annually."

Drown In River

ARNPRIOR, Ont. (CP) — Gilbert Redard, 21, of Calumet Island, and Rosario Belair, 29, of Fort Coulonge, Ont., drowned in the Ottawa River today when they fell out of a 30-foot rowboat on their way to work. Both men were employed by the Upper Ottawa Valley Improvement Company.

Hospital Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Some 1,500 Quebec hospital employees have voted to strike at midnight tonight unless there is a speed-up in contract negotiations. The threatened strike would affect about 12 hospitals, six in the Montreal area.

Watson Gets Job

QUEBEC (CP)—Phil Watson, last year coach of the American Hockey League Buffalo Bisons, has been appointed coach of the Quebec Aces who are also in the AHL, it was announced today.

Before he became coach of the Bisons, Watson coached New York Rangers and Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

Contractor Freed

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A 60-year-old Oregon contractor, kidnapped by three young desperadoes after their escape from a county jail Wednesday, was found safe and unharmed in his parked car here today.

The discovery came about two hours after the trio was captured by sheriff's deputies and police at Missoula, Mont.

Balaguer Tops Vote In Dominican

SANTO DOMINGO (AP)—Conservative Joaquin Balaguer appeared today to have clinched a stunning victory over moderate leftist Juan Bosch in the Dominican Republic presidential elections.

With about half the vote counted, Balaguer, candidate of the Reformist Party, had 319,474 votes to 225,776 for Bosch, leader of the Dominican Revolutionary Party.

Balaguer and his supporters issued triumphant victory claims amid wild celebrations.

In the downtown sector, the heart of the constitutionalist district in the April, 1965, revolution, small knots of hostile looking young partisans of the Bosch party gathered at street corners. Police were patrolling the area.

A heavy vote piled up in the conservative-minded rural areas for Balaguer, who served as vice-president under dictator Rafael Leonidas Trujillo and as president after Trujillo's assassination.

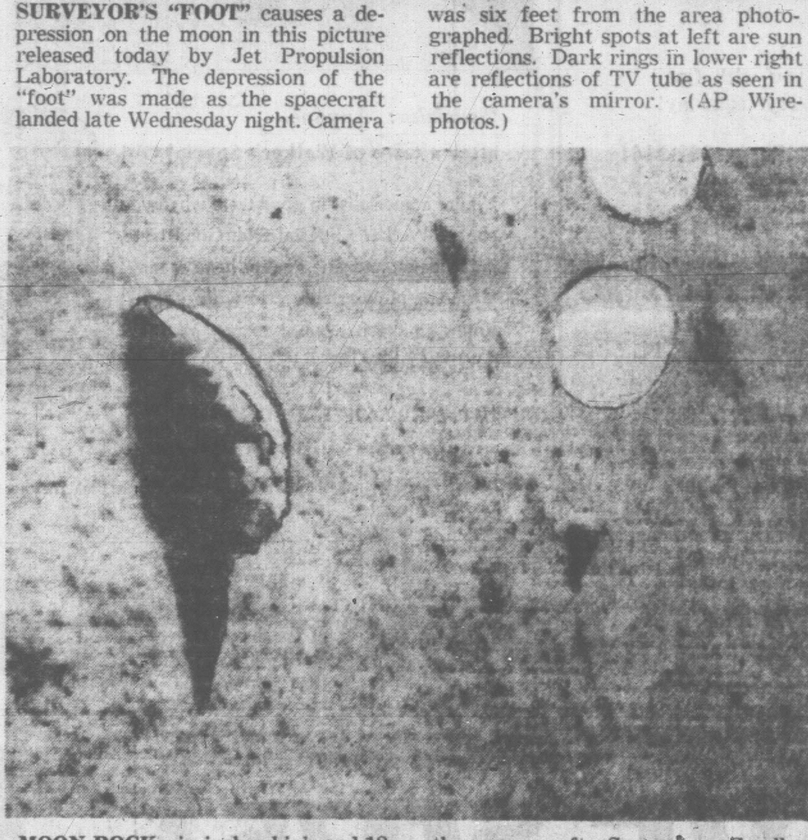
SURVEYOR'S "FOOT" causes a depression on the moon in this picture released today by Jet Propulsion Laboratory. The depression of the "foot" was made as the spacecraft landed late Wednesday night. Camera was six feet from the area photographed. Bright spots at left are sun reflections. Dark rings in lower right are reflections of TV tube as seen in the camera's mirror. (AP Wirephotos.)



MOON ROCK, six inches high and 12 inches long, is shown in this photograph transmitted from the moon by the spacecraft Surveyor. Smaller pebbles are several inches in diameter. Bright spots are reflections of sun.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Surveyor I, defying longshot odds against a first-try success, televised striking photos of the lunar landscape today after a seemingly perfect landing on the moon.

The pictures indicated to scientific viewers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory that the Sea of Storms target area has a relatively smooth, hard surface apparently suitable as a possible descent point for future astronauts.

The successful gentle touchdown, executed precisely as scheduled, was viewed as a long stride forward for the United States' Apollo lunar exploration program. Surveyor's rocket braking system is similar to that on the craft astronauts will use for a landing later in the decade.

A picture series beginning at 2:44 a.m., PDT, using a different TV screen system than that of two earlier batches, showed a broad plain devoid of major features, peppered with either pebbles or pits caused by meteorites. There were several small prominences, and some gouging, as if the surface had been struck by objects from space at an angle.

The pictures showed no damage to the spidery, instrument-jammed craft, 10 feet high and 14 feet in diameter. And they showed its feet resting atop the crust—important evidence in view of opinions of some scientists that the surface might be deep dust or spongy lava that could swallow a landing vehicle.

LAUNCHED MONDAY

The 620-pound Surveyor planted its three legs firmly on the lunar crust at 11:17.37 p.m., PDT, 63 hours and 250,000 miles after its launch Monday from Cape Kennedy.

Its crucial terminal sequence—a cartwheel in space to point its feet moonward, then at 60 miles out a blast from its powerful retro-rocket engine to slow to landing speed of 8 mph—ended with all instruments apparently functioning.

Thirty-five minutes later, it began televising pictures sent throughout North America and overseas by three U.S. networks, employing the Early Bird satellite.

The first batch of three showed a leg and other portions, with the lunar surface in the background.

There was nothing to hint of danger to future manned landing craft.

A second batch of 10 showed more distant terrain—flat and featureless, except for a shadow, apparently that of the spacecraft, in the shape of a three, and what appeared to be a large rock.

The first two series, televised with 200 scan lines compared to 525 for a home TV screen, were dim and fuzzy and difficult to interpret.

Later shots with 600 scan lines—Surveyor is expected to return hundreds before the chill of the lunar nights ends its life 12 days hence—were far clearer.

A laboratory spokesman said after viewing the first 144 pictures — received at the Goldstone tracking station on the desert to the east and relayed here—that the landing was firm enough to cause one foot to make a slight contact depression.

A shadow around the edge of one of the two feet within range of the camera indicated the depression was quite shallow—perhaps two inches, the spokesman said.

Dr. Leonard Jaffe, project scientist, said of the pictures:

"They show a surface generally level, as expected, with objects that appear to be rocks and boulders, or fragments, from close to the spacecraft for as far as the eye can see, apparently to the horizon.

"Some appear to be a foot across.

U.S. HOPES TO PROVE GEMINI 9 NOT JINXED

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—U.S. space officials, buoyed by the successful moon landing of Surveyor, said today that all signs are hopeful for a successful launch at 9:39 a.m. EDT Friday of the hard-luck Gemini 9 spacecraft.

Astronauts Tom Stafford and Eugene Cernan spent part of today at an old familiar pastime—practice.

Engineers were confident they have eliminated the computer system bug that balked Wednesday's Gemini 9 launch only one minute, 40 seconds before blastoff. They replaced two electronic parts, called logic modules, in the system that relays guidance commands from a ground computer to the spacecraft.

"Go" signals streamed in from around the world for the ambitious rendezvous and spacewalk flight.

80,000 Witness Congo Hangings

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—More than 80,000 silent spectators watched as four former prominent cabinet ministers were hanged in one of Leopoldville's main squares today for plotting to overthrow the government.

Former prime minister Evariste Kimba, 40, was the first to go to the gallows. He held himself erect, with a black towel over his face and his hands tied behind his back.

The others — Alexandre Mahamba, 45, a former minister of lands; Senator Emmanuel Bamba, 46, a former finance minister; and Jerome Anany, a former defence minister—were executed at 20-minute intervals.

The four condemned men all walked serenely to their deaths, clad in identical blue shorts. They said nothing and were believed to be gagged under their black hoods.

There were two hangmen, clad in black robes over what appeared to be military uniforms. Four buglers faced each man and played the Last Post before the trap was opened.

The sombre crowd at the hangings contrasted sharply with the shouting, fighting gathering at the four men's hearing Tuesday, when any point the prisoners tried to make was hissed and booed.

The crowd included women and children, but many began leaving immediately after the first execution.

A number of high-ranking military officers, including Col. Pierre Ingila, chief justice at the tribunal which sentenced the men, were in attendance.

But three special chairs were vacant. They were understood to have been left for the three men the condemned politicians were accused of plotting to kill—President Joseph Mobutu, Prime Minister Leonard Mulama and the army chief of staff, Gen. Louis Bobozo.

Mobutu did not respond to last-minute appeals for clemency by religious and diplomatic leaders.

Most major Western embassies were closed and their staffs and nationals were instructed to stay indoors during the executions.

RETIREMENT from public office was announced today by Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania. "I'm not going to run ever again for any public office under any circumstances," he said. Scranton, who lost the Republican presidential nomination to Barry Goldwater in 1964, completes his term as governor next year.

Viet Asks UN To Observe Vote

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—South Viet Nam today formally requested UN observers for its election of a constituent assembly in September.

The request was put verbally to Secretary General Thant by Ambassador Nguyen Duy Lien, South Vietnamese observer to the United Nations.

It was not immediately clear whether the Saigon government wanted the world organization merely to send observers or whether it envisaged a supervisory role for the UN in the elections.

OBSERVERS

A UN spokesman said Lien "informed the secretary general that the government of South Viet Nam intends to hold election for a constituent assembly in September and requested the United Nations to send observers."

He said South Viet Nam would make its request in writing later.

Only last weekend, before the request was made, Thant said in Windsor, Ont., he could not see the use of UN supervision of Vietnamese elections "at this time."

SOVIET OPPOSITION

On his return from Europe on May 5, Thant also said he saw no possibility of a UN supervisory role in Vietnamese elections because it would run into Soviet opposition in the Security Council.

Although the procedure to be followed was unclear, presumably South Viet Nam would be advised by UN officials to send its request — in clearer terms — to the 15-member council.

Some diplomats saw significance in the request in that it was the first time Vietnamese authorities had asked the United Nations to take any part in its troubled internal affairs.

Thant's reaction to the request was not reported.

DE VALERA
. . . majority cut

Close Race In Irish Election

DUBLIN (UPI) — The Irish presidential election developed into a neck-and-neck struggle today as early returns showed a swing away from President Eamon de Valera's traditional strongholds.

Opposition candidate Tom O'Higgins was biting into De Valera's massive 1959 majority of 120,000 in the 38 constituencies and was reported well ahead in the capital.

At 9 a.m. PDT De Valera had 88,776 votes against O'Higgins' 69,269 on the basis of the first four areas to complete counts.

O'Higgins, 49, representing the Fine Gael Party, was polling heavily in the urban areas and had reduced De Valera's 1959 majority in the four rural areas reporting.

Observers believed O'Higgins needed to take substantial majorities in the cities to overcome the traditional strength of De Valera among the agricultural community.

New Findings Open Door To Possible Cancer Cause

CHICAGO (AP) — Two new findings that open a new approach to the elusive goal of finding the cause of cancer and the means of preventing it were disclosed today by a medical research team from Columbia University.

The researchers presented the strongest tentative evidence yet that cancers may be started by viruses which then move on to repeat their destructive work in adjoining cells.

Dr. John K. Lattimer, chairman of the department of urology at Columbia University in New York, said virus-like particles have been found for the first time in healthy looking cells lying adjacent to cancer cells in prostate glands. They were not found in the cancer cells.

He said his researchers also discovered that these cells, which appeared normal under ordinary-light microscopes, were shown by electron microscopes to be actually growing at the "same tremendous rate" as cancer cells.

"The discovery of either condition was unusual, but when they appear in combination it becomes exciting," he said in an interview at the annual meeting of the American Urological Association.

Dr. Myron Tannenbaum, pathologist member of the research team, exhibited picture slides at the urologists' convention.

Lattimer credited Tannenbaum with making the discoveries.

DEFINES NEXT STEP

Lattimer said the next step is to attempt to isolate the virus-like particles, grow them in a tissue culture and infect healthy tissue cultures with them.

If the virus proved to cause cancer, the final step would be an attempt to produce an anti-cancer vaccine, patterned after the polio vaccines and using dead or attenuated cancer viruses.

He said the work would require "six or seven years" before the final answer is found.

Lattimer said the virus theory does not conflict with current knowledge that cancers can be caused by chemical agents or other irritants. He said irritation or a change in hormone balance could alter a cell's resistance sufficiently to permit a virus to take over.

Other investigators have theorized that some cancers, including leukemia, are caused by viruses, but laboratory confirmation has been spotty. Lattimer suggested that may be because the studies centred on the actual cancer tumors rather than adjacent tissue.

Red's Luna X Loses Power

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Luna X unmanned spaceship, the moon's first man-made satellite, has run out of power and stopped sending information to earth, the news agency Tass reported today.

Luna X went into close orbit of the moon April 3, was in radio contact with Soviet stations until May 30 and made a total of 219 transmissions, the news agency added.

Tass also said that, as expected, the magnetic field around the moon is extremely weak. Micrometeorites are more numerous in space around the moon than in interplanetary space.

Japan Firm to Develop Oil Holdings in Alberta

TOKYO (Reuters) — The Japan Petroleum Exploration Co. has reached an agreement to develop petroleum resouces in Alberta with local interests, a spokesman sad today.

The agreement subject to approval by the Japanese government and the province of Alberta, will be initialled in Canada soon by Kiyoshi Yoshida, executive director of the Japanese firm, and representatives of a Canadian company, whose name could not be disclosed at this stage, the spokesman said.

Yoshida was scheduled to leave for Canada Friday.

The agreement concerns the acquisition of 50.1 per cent of the Canadian firm's stocks by the Japanese company and a joint project for the development of petroleum resources by the two organizations, the spokesman said.

Under the present plan, the Canadian firm, which already owns 617 square miles of mine lots in Alberta, would acquire another 308 square miles of mine lots in Alberta and two other western provinces, the spokesman said.

Oil fields would be developed at five sites in the 925 square miles of mine lots, to mine 2,859,700,000 gallons of oil at each site over a period of 20 years, he said.

First U.K. Gas Shortage Felt From Ship Strike

LONDON (CP)—A judicial inquiry into Britain's shipping strike opens formal hearings today, faced with the grim forecast that the best it can hope to do is get the country's trade back to normal in four week's time.

And for the first time, the striking National Union of Seamen has summoned the help of other unions and hit at the country's vital oil imports.

William Hogarth, general secretary of the 65,000 - member union, said Wednesday that even if the inquiry comes up with a basis for settlement, it will be four weeks before most ships can put to sea.

An interim report is not expected before the end of next week. Hogarth told a press conference that even if the report is satisfactory, it will take a week of hard bargaining to end the strike and another week to get crews, cargoes and passengers aboard the ships.

GAS RUNS SHORT

The first gasoline shortage caused by the strike hit thousands of motorists today in southern England.

Regent Petroleum, Britain's third-biggest oil company, said 80 of its filling stations in the Southampton area were running dry because British coastal tankers that normally supply the local storage depot are all strikebound.

The union also declared "black" two large tankers manned by foreign crews, which it said were being used for "flagrant strike-breaking." This meant the tankers, both under Panamanian registry, cannot be assisted by tugs.

Few oil tankers have been tied up by the strike. The union charged the oil companies with diverting British-manned tankers to other ports and bringing foreign ships to British ports.

As the strike entered its 18th day today, the point of congestion was drawing steadily nearer for major ports. Ford Geddes, chairman of the Shipping Federation, representing shipowners, has predicted it for next Tuesday at London and Liverpool.

The union said 689 ships were tied up and nearly 20,000 seamen on strike.

'Unnatural' Calm Settles Over Saigon

SAIGON (AP)—Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's South Vietnamese troops took over the Buddhist stronghold of Hue today without any resistance from Buddhist-led elements or anti-government troops that have held the northern city in open rebellion since mid-March.

The junta's forces seized Hue's radio station and other strongpoints in the city 400 miles northeast of Saigon a day after the ruling generals came to a political agreement with their Buddhist opponents in Saigon.

Hue was the last territorial strongpoint of the anti-government forces. Its recapture was a major victory for Ky, who has managed to stay in power with the support of his fellow generals and the United States despite the massive campaign mounted against him by the Buddhists.

After weeks of street disturbances by Buddhist youths, Saigon appeared unnaturally calm today. However, some Buddhist elements protested the Buddhist - government compromise agreement to add 10 civilians to the ruling directorate of 10 generals.

TAKEOVER BLOODLESS

Following up its seizure May 23 of Da Nang, the other Buddhist stronghold, the junta's troops swept into Hue without a shot after the departure of units of the dissident-riddled 1st Vietnamese Division,

Wednesday more than 1,000 students sacked and burned the U.S. consulate and an adjoining consulate residence in Hue.

A major factor in the government's reassertion of authority in Hue was a pledge of loyalty to the Saigon regime by Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, the rival to Ky whose ouster March 10 as commander of the northernmost 1st Corps gave the Buddhists an opportunity for their anti-government campaign.

Ky and Thi came to a truce last week at a surprise meeting arranged by the United States.

Buddhist crowds reacted angrily to the announcement of the compromise formula Wednesday. A mob of youths burned an effigy of President Johnson.

APPOINT CIVILIANS

The agreement came after two meetings of the ruling junta and representatives of the Buddhist Institute. The chief provision was that 10 civilians would be named by "mass organizations, religions and political parties" to the ruling directorate by Sunday.

It also called for election of a new junta chairman next Monday. The present chairman is Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, the Roman Catholic chief of state who with Ky has been a chief target of Buddhist protests.

The enlarged junta—or directorate—is also to name a "people's and armed forces council" before June 19 to help the present war cabinet until a civilian government takes over

The junta has pledged election of a constituent assembly Sept. 11 to draft a constitution and clear the way for a civilian regime.

Rhodesia Crisis Talks Resumed

SALISBURY (Reuters) — The second round of informal talks between British and Rhodesian officials was due to open today behind closed doors, as did initial discussions in London last month.

The two teams — seeking a basis for a negotiated settlement of the six-month Rhodesian independence crisis — were unchanged, except for the addition of an extra man on each side

The teams had 10 days to think over the initial discussions and prepare for the current round.

Government officials here stressed that the secrecy the British government requested for the talks will be maintained.

Sir Cornelius Greenfield, chief economic adviser to Prime Minister Ian Smith, is head of the Rhodesian team. Duncan Watson, assistant undersecretary of state at the Commonwealth relations office, heads the British team.

NORTH VAN TRUSTEES GET UNION OFFER

Schools May Be Open for Exams

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The striking North Vancouver local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CLC) offered Wednesday night to send 180 school board employees back to work to keep schools open for final examinations.

The union offer was the first breakthrough in a strike that started May 23 against the school board, North Vancouver city and district, and the North Shore Health Unit.

School board officials had expressed concern earlier this week that 18,000 students in the Vancouver suburb might not be able to write their June examinations if the strike against the school board continued

Municipal services — garbage collection, parks maintenance and sewer and road maintenance to name a few — have been tied up since the walkout started. Negotiations were to continue today.

The employees' offer asked for written guarantees from the school board that those who return to work will be given the same salary increase as municipal workers once the strike is settled.

Peter Powell, school board chairman, did not comment on the offer, but said a formal reply would be made to the union today.
